School buses to get radios

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

All school buses in Haliburton County will now be equipped with two-way radios as part of the new two year contract between the board of education and the school bus operators.

The radios will be purchased and installed at the expense of the board and radios will also be purchased for and installed in spare buses over the next two years.

The board also agreed to purchase a maintenance service contract the cost of which will be deducted from the 10 monthly payments to the operators. The operators will also be responsible for insuring the radios. As a result board policy will be changed to remove all route protection to bus operators.

The contract, which will take effect on September 1, was decided upon at the June 27 meeting of the transportation committee and approved at the regular meeting of the board of education on June 28.

The contract gives the operators a five percent increase the first and a one percent increase plus a cost of living allowance in the second year effective June 30, 1989. The same increases were agreed upon for the gas escalator clause increase and the increase in charter rates.

It was decided, by mutual consent, that buses 10 years old may be maintained in service for an additional one or two years in cases of low mileage or exceptional states of repair.

Present at the committee meeting were Chairman Ross Anderson, Trustees David Villard, John Cooper and Wayne Wood, Director of Education Stuart Baker, Business Administrator Jim Bradley and bus operators Jack Brohm, Barb and Jim Todd and Mervin Barry.

Man killed near Dorset in crash

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

A Campbellford man is dead after a single car accident near Dorset, early Canada Day morning.

Gerald P. Heystek, 24, of RR 2 Campbellford, was killed at about 3:00 a.m. Friday morning when he lost control of his 1982 Dodge truck on Bear Lake Road, about 4 km southeast of County Road 12. The OPP says the truck skidded into the ditch and rolled over, trapping Heystek beneath it.

Officially, the OPP say the crash was caused by Heystek driving too fast on a gravel road and that he was killed because he wasn't wearing his seat belt. They report that he had been drinking but until the autopsy is completed, the OPP still don't know if it was a contributing factor in the accident.

These children are racing towards their grand prize of a ring-shaped lolly pop at West Guilford's Canada Day celebrations on Friday. Rain only touched down on the spectators for a few minutes but it didn't dampen anyone's spirits. Even though the Community Centre, which sponsors the event, didn't receive its regular grant from the province, so many people and businesses contributed to the events that the organizers even think they'll break even—a first. There are more pictures and story starting on page 24.

Kushog youth is assaulted

YMCA Wanakita buys Hockey camp

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff reporter

This autumn, one Haliburton tradition will be making way for another. After the campers leave the familiar grounds of Haliburton Hockey Haven in September, the camp will be known by another familiar name—Camp Wanakita.

On Thursday morning, the owner of the Haliburton Hockey Haven

Sports Camp/Quanahar Ringette Camp/Koshlong Outdoors Centre announced to his staff that 22 years after Wren Blair and Jim Gregory began the summer tradition, the combination camp was being sold to the Hamilton YMCA camp, Wanakita. For 12 of those years Bob Smith had owned the camp and it was now time for him to move on.

Across the lake a few hours later, the director of Wanakita could hardly contain his excitement as he prepared to make the announcement to his staff. It is a big move for Wanakita and more responsibility for Steve Heming yet the challenge of making a great camp even better was something to be savoured.

"I'm elated," says Heming. "It continues to do for me personally what I so strongly believe in. My insides are jumping for joy."

"I wouldn't have sold it to anybody," Smith joins in. "It had to be people who carry on the traditions of camp and camping."

In effect, what will happen is that the north end of Koshlong Lake will be known by one name. The 1,000 acres of Wanakita will be joined by the 34 acres of Hockey Haven, with only one cottage nestled in between the adjoining properties. It will still be a place children and teenagers flock to with anticipation but the only difference will be that none of them will arrive expecting to play hockey or ringette for half the day.

When the Haliburton Hockey Haven was started in 1966, the big names in hockey would make their way to the Haliburton arena each summer to help young players hone their skills. Hockey was the emphasis but not the only activity the campers would take part in. The owners believed it was important for the youngsters to enjoy the other aspects of camping as well, such as swimming, kayaking, canoeing and hiking.

But the camp was attracting the girl hockey players and it was decided to create Quanahar Ringette

Boshkung Regatta in jeopardy because of insurance premiums

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

High insurance rates may be killing long-held local traditions. The Boshkung Lake Cottagers' Association debated on Saturday whether or not to continue their annual Regatta, which has been held for over 30 years.

Association President Bill Dies reports that the insurance to cover the one-day event would amount to over $1200. This is a jump of almost $1000 dollars, he adds. He says in past years, even last year, the association paid about $250 for the entire summer's activities. Now they are being asked to pay $1200 for a single day.

Mike Gump, the membership vice-president, says the Regatta is a very important tradition for the people on the Lake. He says it's one of the only events in the summer which draws most of the families on Boshkung together.

While the executive called for alternatives to the regatta, most of the people at the meeting wanted

Some even suggested risking the regatta with out any insurance coverage, because nothing has happened in the past. Most on the executive were dead against this idea, saying should something happen, the executives themselves would be per-them to look into ways of getting around the insurance problem and save the regatta. Some people suggested that entrants sign waivers so the association could not be sued. Dies says in order to enforce that, the race area would have to be "fenced off" and all non-racers or people would have to be kept off the lake. It was a good idea, he says, but nearly impossible to enforce.

sonally liable. Dies is upset that insurance has risen sharply. He says traditionally, lake and cottaging associations have made very few claims to their insurance companies. In light of this, he and other members of the Boshkung executive can't figure out why they have been hit with such a large and drastic increase in their in-

Project P: War on Porn

by MIKE PARK

Staff reporter

Minden OPP Constable Mike Maybee has joined the war on pornography. He has become one of the latest representatives of "Project P", a joint OPP—Metro Toronto Police effort to stop the spread of obscene material.

Maybee says his main job will be on the public relations side of the battle. In August, he will begin showing a slide and video presentation on what is obscene, under the current laws, and what is not. He says many of the pictures shown in the presentation are quite graphic, but they are necessary to get the point across.

Maybee says pornography has a doubly negative influence on other parts of society. First, he says, it is a major source of income for organized crime. He says they receive in the neighbourhood of $8 billion per year from pornography. Canada accounts for about $500 million of that income and child pornography accounts for another $500 million.

The second influence, which worries Maybee even more, is the effect pornography has on other types of crime. He says people who abuse this material can turn to rape and sexually assault. He says he knows of cases where pornography has led to family violence. He says pornography depicts women in degrading and violent situations and this can be interpreted by some people as "normal behavior." These people will then begin to treat partners in a violent manner or turn to rape and sexual assault, thinking it to be fine.

Maybee says his presentation will be limited to people over the age of 18 because of its matter-of-fact graphic showings. It is part of a series of three presentations that are available. They are Family Violence, Pornography and Child Abuse. Maybee says he will have his presentation ready for showing in August.

"Project P" was started in 1975 when the OPP was interested in finding out if there was a connection between pornography and organized crime. The program then began to take up the area of investigation and prosecution as well as public relations. Many of the officers involved with the project are used as resource officers by other police forces in their fight against pornography.

Public relations is really only a small part of "Project P's" mandate. Sgt. Richard Bryer, one of Metro Toronto's representatives on the project says most of their energy is spent investigating, charging and prosecuting big pornographers.

Bryer says they do very little at the street level. The Project, he says, concentrates most of its resources on getting the importers, makers and major, wholesale distributors. And they have been very successful.

In April, they confiscated 1003 obscene videos during a raid and earlier confiscated another 50,000. Bryer says they have seized $82,000 worth of pornographic materials. Most of the material comes up from the United States, he says. The Project has even made raids and arrests in B.C. for those shipping porn to Ontario.

Any group wishing to see Const. Maybee's presentation on pornography should contact him at the Minden OPP office at 286-1431.

Literacy program wanted

by MIKE PARK

Staff reporter

Haliburton may get a new service in the fall. The John Howard Society has applied to the Ministry of Skills Development for funding to open a literacy program in the village.

The nearest Society office is in Lindsay and the Society's executive director, Paula Osmok, says that's just too far.

"Providing service from such a distance is difficult," she says.

The new centre will be a sub-office of the Lindsay John Howard

Society. It will provide a one-on-one, volunteer-based program to teach adults how to read. Osmok says she hopes the government will provide the $28,000 needed to start up the program. Being a member agency, she says the United Way will likely provide the funds for the actual running of the office and the overhead costs.

The John Howard Society will also provide other services. Osmok says it's main mandate is crime prevention, law reform and helping prisoners and former convicts him into the bowels of their ship where Howard endured unspeakable hardships and torture. Upon his release, he dedicated his life to prison reform around the world, so that others would not have to suffer as he did. He died of typhoid in 1790 in Russia, while he was touring military prisons there.

His cause was carried on by some of his followers, who established the Howard League in England in 1816 to continue prison reform.

In Canada, the society was originally called the Citizen's Ser-

Lindsay office too far away to serve rehabilitate. To that end, the Society provides programs for employment opportunities for ex-convicts, literacy campaigns, and public education campaigns for drinking and driving. They also help the convict re-adjust and re-enter society.

The Society itself is very old.

John Howard was an English sheriff, who was captured by French pirates in 1756, at the beginning of the Seven Years War, and made a prisoner of war. The French threw vice Association. It was founded in 1929 by Brigadier General Drapper, then the Police Chief of Toronto. In 1946 it became the John Howard Society and has since spread across Canada into the United States.

The Victoria—Haliburton office was established in 1982 as a sub-office of the Peterborough branch. It became a branch in its own right in 1985, and is still the smallest of Ontario's 16 offices.

Board supports better controls

by JAY KERR-WILSON

Staff reporter

The Haliburton County Board of Education has supported the Elgin County Board of Education's intention to petition the Federal Minister of Justice for tighter controls on people out on day passes under a Lieutenant-Governor's Warrant.

The Elgin Board of Education passed a resolution seeking support from other counties after a teenage girl was abducted and sexually assaulted by two men out on day passes from the local psychiatric hospital.

Lieutenant-Governor's Warrants are served on people deemed to be criminally insane before a court of law. A person under such a warrant remains under provincial care and custody until he is judged to be responsible enough to return to society.

The Elgin Board of Education feels that the interests of the general community appear to be secondary to that of individuals committed as criminally insane with regards to supervision of people issued day passes.

The board wants to see local representation on any board of review dealing with criminally insane patients and stricter supervision of the prisoners.

Regatta coverage risky

surance costs. A local insurance broker, who does not handle the Boshkung insurance, says he understands why prices are so high. He says the problem is two fold. First, the courts have given out so much in claims recently that companies need to raise their costs to cover them. Secondly, there are so few insurance companies that are willing to handle such one day events, such as regattas, that this will also drive the prices up. He says that the market for such coverage is so small yet so risky, he wouldn't even know which companies to call for such coverage.

Dies says it was this kind of insurance problem that killed the regatta on 12 Mile Lake last summer. He says so far this year, only Kushog Lake is holding a regatta, and they are billing it as a picnic.

Eion Finn, of Wind-sur-Finn, says the insurance costs for the regattas held by and sponsored by the store are covered by a combination of waivers and group insurance under the Canadian Yachting Association. The association, he says, covers them where the waivers don't. He says the same insurance covers the windsurfing school he runs.

Boshkung secretary Carole Payne suggested a similar path of action for the Association. She says Boshkung should band together with other cottagers' associations and create a kind of co-operative insurance fund. That way, she says, the costs could be reduced among a large number of cottagers, at a lower cost, with a very small chance of a claim being made.

The Association is looking into the new suggestions to solve the insurance problem.

Camp traditions continue

Camp using the same facilities at different time slots in the summer. It is the only camp endorsed by the Ontario Ringette Association and until recently, was the only provincial ringette camp.

As time progressed and people were having more leisure time on their hands, the camp was opened in June and September under the name of Koshlong Outdoors Centre. Here the emphasis was on taking advantage of all the possibilities for recreation Haliburton had to offer.

"We thought it was important for each group to have its own identity and it's worked well," says Smith of the confusion over the different names. All the camps use the same facilities—10 sleeping camps which will hold 20 campers in a crutch, dining hall/kitchen, recreation hall, ball hockey court, storage buildings and staff houses, not to mention the "magnificent" 1200' sand beach which gently slopes out into the lake. During July and August, the skaters would be bused in to the Dysart arena.

The success of the camp was based on the staff, says Smith, who bought the operation in the fall of 1976. "It's a lot of very hard work by a lot of great staff members." As he's told his summer army of counsellors, and as Hemming will agree wholeheartedly, "staff is what makes or breaks a camp. It's you people who will give that camper the best summer experience."

'It felt just happily together. It's exciting that the two camps are going to remain in fine camping traditions'

More than a year ago, the two men were talking about camp life in general when Smith mentioned he was thinking about selling the camp. "It's been a great 11 years but I guess I'm anxious to tackle some new areas, to try a new tact."

Heming could hardly believe his good fortune. At the same time Smith was considering his future plans, Wanakita had just received a consultant's report about the future of Camp Wanakita.

Like Hockey Haven, Wanakita was just intended as a summer camp for the youths of the Hamilton/Burlington area when the YMCA purchased the property 35 years ago. But the "Y" always looks ahead and when the demand suggested a need for a longer camp season, it developed programs for spring and fall as well.

"We really started the push in '75, '76," explains Heming and by 1977, the camp offered programs year round, thinking that there was a demand, albeit a small one, for winter activities. No one foresaw the increased popularity of winter sports such as cross country skiing or the emphasis on outdoor education programs in schools. "Before we knew it, we were at the maximum capacity."

The consultants told YMCA that since the demand would likely increase, so too should the facility. In a series of five-year plans, they laid out the groundwork and got the wheels in motion. Then, "through all this, all of a sudden, boom"—Smith announced he was considering the sale of Haliburton Hockey Haven.

"The initial reaction (from the people at the head office) was 'This is all very exciting but money is the key. Can we do it,'" says Heming. Wanakita is just one of seven major branches of the Hamilton/Burlington YMCA and the year's fundraising had to be divided amongst all of them. The possibility by expanding Wanakita all in one step was a bit daunting. "It's a nice idea. It's a dream."

But in the year that followed, the dream began to take shape. Problems were solved, plans were made, and gradually it began to seem a little less impossible. Finally, last Thursday the two camps were able to announce a deal had been made.

For Hockey Haven/Quanahar/Koshlong alumni, the news is sad because of the happy memories they have enjoyed at the camp. Some of them arrived at the facilities of campers and returned in following years as staff members. "It meant every summer to them," says Smith of their reaction when they heard the news. "They were sad it was over but they recognized I had an opportunity to move on and do something different."

But there are many other hockey camps in the province and the Can-Am ringette association has just started up a camp and will jump at the opportunity to be the only camp endorsed by the provincial association. Even the municipality of Dysart will not be a loser, since the costs of keeping the ice on the rink all summer are barely covered by the money the camps generate.

The biggest change will be at Wanakita. The addition of land and buildings affords it possibilities Heming has only been dreaming for in the past years.

Wanakita has become just as much a Haliburton camp as it is one for the youngsters of that chunk of the Golden Horseshoe around Hamilton. Over the years, the camp has developed a policy of buying everything it could locally, and more local children have been taking part in the camp's programs, especially from September to June, when county children make up half of the participants.

With its large playing fields and increased sleeping quarters, one plan Heming will start to work away on is a day camp for local children. "We've been thinking about it for four or five years but we didn't have the space," he says. There's a definite need for recreational programs for local children and where there's a need, there's the YMCA wanting to fill it. The children would be bused to the camp in the morning and bused home later in the afternoon, perhaps following the school bus routes already established. The idea will have to be fine-tuned during the next months. "It's a natural for us."

This also means the leadership program can expand. An essential aspect of Wanakita, the program can give young people the skills they need to provide friendship and guidance to the campers who will live with them for 24 hours a day during their stay. The leaders could be trained in the same area as the day campers and the two programs would blend perfectly.

All in all, Heming and Smith feel that nothing but good will be the result of the amalgamation. Hockey Haven won't be gone; it will just become part of another camping tradition which will continue to hold a special place in the memories of young campers for many years to come.

"It felt just happily together," says Heming. "It is exciting that the two camps are going to remain in fine camping traditions."

'It's been a great 11 years but I guess I'm anxious to tackle some new areas, to try a new tact,' says Smith. Heming is overjoyed about the new challenge. 'I'm elated. My insides are jumping for joy'

Sign of the times: This fall, there will be only one sign at the cross-roads of Koshlong Lake Road. On Thursday, Wanakita's Steve Heming and Hockey Haven's Bob Smith shook hands over the deal which will amalgamate the two popular camps

Wanakita is too costly for board

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

A motion to send the Grade 6 students from Archie Stouffer Elementary School to Camp Wanakita to participate in the Sunship Earth Program was defeated by the board of education because of the costs involved.

The motion, moved by Wendy Ladurantaye, would have sent the students to the camp in October as part of a pilot program with the hope of having other classes participate in the program in the future.

The cost of the program is $120/student for a four day outing. Glen Carter, a teacher at Archie Stouffer, appeared before the board to request permission for the trip and to ask the board to contribute $3,000 towards the costs.

The high price tag on the trip was explained by a low student/staff ratio and because the program is supervised by professional educators and counsellors who are trained to deal with a variety of student problems from hyper-activity to falling in love.

The Sunship Earth program is based on the idea that our planet is a sunship hurtling through space and that each one of us has a responsibility to maintain and protect our environment. It stresses ecological understanding and outdoor education and offers a variety of educational nature trails and environmental awareness developing activities. Sunship Earth is used by students throughout the world and Camp Wanakita is the only location in Ontario the program is taught.

Carter said that right now it's possible for a student to go through the Haliburton school system and never receive any outdoor education. McKay Brydon, principal at Archie Stouffer, attended the board meeting and said that many children who grow up in Haliburton know less about nature than students from the city who went through the Sunship Earth program. He said money spent in Grade 6 on the program will be repaid throughout the remainder of the student's schooling in educational value.

In defeating the motion, the trustees showed support for the principle of the program but said that they couldn't justify spending the money on just one class. "If we do it for one, we have to do it for the rest," said Len Salvatori.

"It might be a good program," said Ross Anderson, "but if you start to hand out money over and above allowances you'll get inundated with requests."

Wendy Ladurantaye supported the motion and said she "felt very strongly in favour of it."

Curriculum Co-Ordinator Dale Robinson also spoke out in favour of the program. "No program does (outdoor education) better than the Sunship program," he said. "We're sitting on top of this program and they're bussing kids up here from Windsor to take part." He suggested letting the students from Archie Stouffer take part in the program, get a complete report from the students and teachers and then consider whether or not to build it into the budget.

Board Chairman Lyn Craigmyle summed up the general feeling among the trustees in that no one was doubting the quality of the Sunship Earth Program it was the amount of money being spent on one class from one school that was causing the concerns.

Space issue

For the past couple of summers, as business has boomed in Haliburton, the pressure of parking space has grown acute. Last summer there was concern among many local merchants that a crisis was looming. It was feared that unless something was done to alleviate the pressure on available parking space, people would shun the town at peak periods, and business would suffer.

The concern over parking in Haliburton was justified. There wasn't enough space to meet the demand at the height of summer, even of people could be persuaded to park a block or two away from the core and walk, something that many visitors and local people alike are reluctant to do in a community with a business core not much more than a block long.

Inevitably, Dysart council felt the brunt of criticism about the parking shortage. It was felt by many local people that council had an obligation to provide more parking space in the interests of the community's continued development. And it was said by some that council was not acknowledging that obligation.

Well, a glance around the downtown core of Haliburton these days shows that council has taken the criticism to heart. In the past few weeks, more parking space has been created between the Rails End Gallery and the town dock, a lot has been purchased on the east side of Maple Ave. and paved for parking, and on the west side of the same street, a large section of the CNR lands have also been paved and marked. To ensure that the public knows the spaces are available, the locations have been clearly marked with the familiar 'P' sign, designating municipal parking.

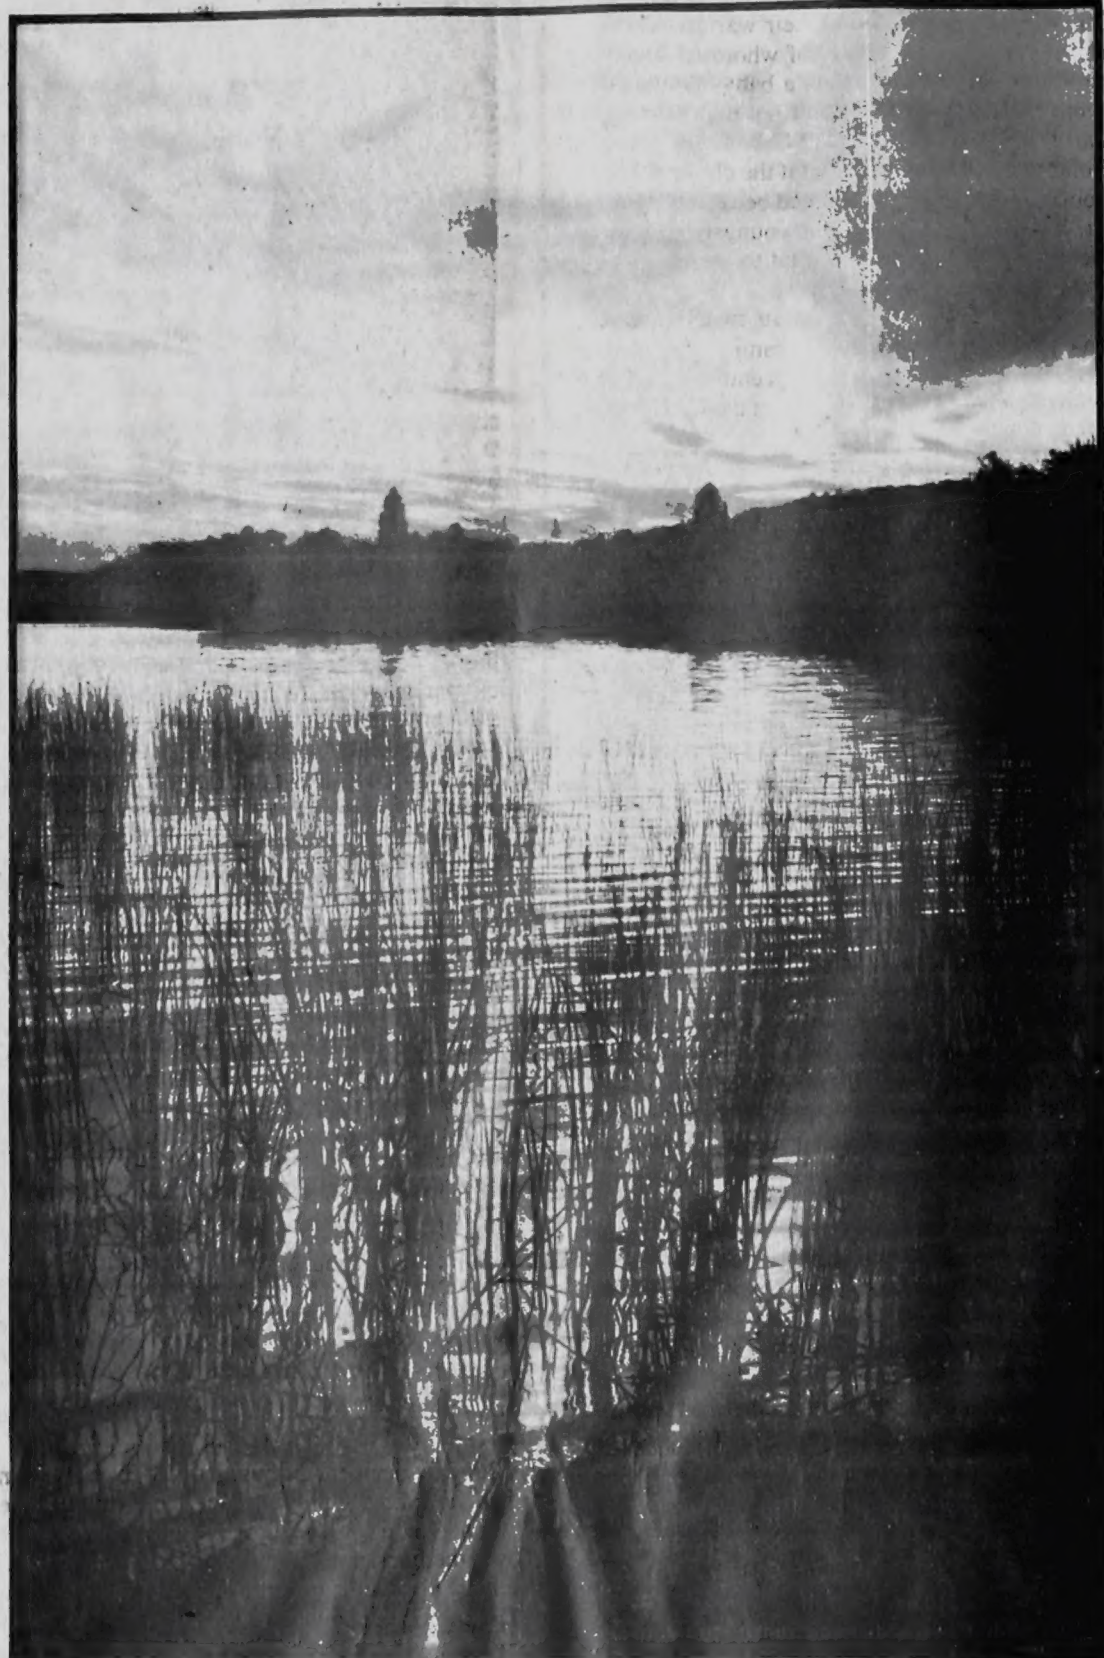

If there is still a parking problem in Haliburton — and there may very well be as the pattern of growth continues — council cannot be expected to solve the problem alone. Local property owners will have to do their part as well. Working together, those with lands on the south side of Highland Street may be able to facilitate a smoother flow of traffic by opening up a corridor that would exit onto Maple Street, and at the same time create more parking spaces, even if only temporarily, until redevelopment takes place. Whenever new building projects for the downtown core are planned, the provision of parking must be assigned a high priority.

In the meantime, there is a great deal more parking space near main street now than there was last year. The need for more parking space will continue to be a concern in Haliburton, but councillors have shown in the past few weeks that they are prepared to respond when the need is acute. And for that, they deserve the thanks of merchants and shoppers alike.

In touch

Many Haliburton County parents will be pleased to learn that the Haliburton County Board of Education has agreed to purchase two-way radios for the all buses operating under its jurisdiction. The decision was part of a new two year agreement with local bus operators ratified by the board last Tuesday night.

Providing an efficient communication system for all buses operating in the county can hardly be called a trivial expenditure, even if the costs are small in relation to the board's $10 million budget. It is however, money well spent. There are many situations in which a bus driver may need to communicate quickly with a base station, either at the board office or at the bus operator's home base, but consider just one of them. It is winter, and a bus slips off the roadway and into a snowbank on a back road. The nearest house is a half a mile away. What does the driver do — stay with the bus and hope another vehicle will come along soon, or leave the bus to walk to the house for help? Leaving creates serious liability risks. Staying could mean a very long wait in very cold conditions. With a radio, the driver stays with the bus, the students are supervised, and help is swiftly dispatched. If there is injury involved, swift communication could save lives.

Don't judge all terriers the same

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

I think it's time I took a shot at clearing something up while not coming off sounding really snotty. It may or may not work. What I want to clear up regards dogs, people and the media. You see my dog is a Bull Terrier, or an English Bull Terrier as they're now called, but people think he's a Pit Bull because of what they've picked up on TV, radio or read in the papers. There is a big difference between Pit Bulls and Bull Terriers but there has been a failure to diligently inform the general public of this, and instead, Staffordshire Terriers, Staffordshire Bull Terriers and English Bull Terriers have been put in one big heap with Pit Bulls. My life would be easier if people didn't believe everything they heard on CBC or read in the newspapers because in this case their accuracy leaves something to be desired. From my personal research on Pit Bulls, I'd say their nefarious reputation is at a mythological proportion and as for identifying one, I doubt the average person could pick out a Pit Bull from a crowd of mutts.

The point is, my dog is not a Pit Bull, he doesn't even look like one, and I'm sure I don't bring him to work to scare the daylights out of customers. My dog doesn't kill, maim or disfigure for pleasure. Most of the time he just lays in the dirt dreaming of handouts or of watching TV from my reclining chair. Pretty violent eh? When I first brought my dog to the feed store (for company, no protection) I was mildly amused at the reactions people had when they saw him, everything from paranoia to "is he ever cute".

Now I tend to get a little impatient with the attitudes and the accusations that my dog is a Pit Bull and therefore vicious. (I guess I didn't know it was a sign of aggression when a Bull Terrier climbs up in your lap and falls asleep, maybe I should of been scared and didn't know better.) So far my little dog has shown he prefers a comfortable chair, cold beer and someone to give him a good mauling once in a while. Never once has he tried to rip out my throat when I tried to pet him, nor has he done this to anyone else. My dog isn't a Pit Bull, he's a Bull Terrier like Spuds or Blue or Meatball. He likes everyone who likes him and even those who despise him. So before you get into a state of terror for no reason, visualize Spuds in a Hawaiian shirt and try to be scared of that. Bull Terriers are nice family dogs who deserve a closer, less hysterical look, maybe even a scratch behind the ear.

Recycling positive

To the Editor:

It is gratifying to see the positive response to Mr. Lilius' call for recycling as part of the solution to our critical problem of waste disposal.

A trip to the dump is a depressing event for me. Those mountains of cardboard boxes are a reminder of clear-cut hillsides, erosion of the soil which nourished the slaughtered trees and silt-filled streams no longer fit habitat for marine life.

The recycling habit is an easy one to develop, taking little more effort than the alternative frequent trips to the dump. For me it began in earnest during the war. Who can remember when, in order to purchase a tube of toothpaste, you had to turn in the old exhausted one? or the fun of stamping on tin cans to flatten them? The paper drives on Saturday mornings? At our place there are four boxes in the basement which receive metal, glass, newsprint and other recyclable paper. Two or three times a year the filled boxes are taken to Peterborough or Bracebridge and started on the route to renewal. How much better it would be if these could be handled on a community basis. In other municipalities, garbage has been reduced by 10-35 percent by these simple measures.

Composting of kitchen and garden waste is the best form of recycling, as the fertile product can be used right on-site—no packaging and no transportation.

There are further steps that can be taken to reduce the volume of garbage, devastation of natural resources and pollution of air, soil and water. Why should Haliburton be the last corner of the province to undertake responsible waste management?

A born-again recycler,

Jean Clarke,

HERE WE ARE at the beginning of the good old summertime and I often think just how lucky we are to be living here in the heart of vacationland. The summer is a very happy time of the year. It's the time when business places always seem to be busy, most people seem to have a smile on their face, and everyone seems to be working, especially this year when the Help Wanted column in the paper is very long. Oh yes, we agree, that there's the odd person who comes into the area with the idea of making things difficult for those people in stores who have to wait on them. These same people are hard to satisfy no matter where they go and they make it a practice of continually complaining about this or about that and the food in the local restaurants is never good enough. They complain about prices or they complain about service. Thank goodness these complainers make up a small minority of our summer visitors. Some people I hear complaining that the summer months are nothing but a pain in the neck due to the fact that they have to line up at the check-out counters, line-up to buy tickets to an entertainment event or they are upset when they can't find a parking spot on the main street. Why then is it that when we go to any major city or town in Ontario we have trouble finding parking space, or we will line-up for tickets to sporting events or wait in line to get into a restaurant. Yes we don't mind this inconvenience when we are away but we can't tolerate it here in the Highlands of Haliburton. Others are perturbed with the traffic tie-ups that we face here during the peak periods of July and August, while others complain that when too many people are in town it's hard to find a place to walk on the sidewalks. None of these so called problems bother me and it shouldn't bother you. It's great to see the town come alive and we must remember that these people who are walking on our sidewalks are at the same time spending money that will boost our economy. Yes, I think that we all have to agree that it's the nicest time of the year. We have to admit that there's another side of the coin that points out to us that a few people who come here cause a great deal of problems with vandalism, littering and just plain being a general nuisance. Let's all hope that this summer everyone will use a little common sense and come here not to destroy things, but to have a good time and enjoy the summer.

Best of luck to Don Popple in the coming year as he takes over as president of the Rotary Club of Haliburton. Don stepped into the drivers seat last Thursday evening at the club's year end meeting held at Wig-a-Mog Inn.

In conversation with Reeve Murray Fearrey the other day he told me that the village of Haliburton has double the Municipal parking space that it had a year ago. There's more parking now near the town dock and two new lots have been opened near the Drag River Municipal Building on Maple Avenue. The cry has been out for sometime now for more parking, now we have it.

New seats have been installed at the Molou Theatre in Haliburton and from all reports movie goers are really enjoying the extra comfort. The old seats have been in the theatre since it was built over 40 years ago. The owner Lou Consky told me the other day that the new seats have been spaced further apart leaving more leg room for the customers. I dropped into the theatre one day last week to take a look at the new seats and was really surprised to see how comfortable they really were.

The Superannuated Teachers of Haliburton Unit of District 18 held a very successful dinner meeting at Birch Point Lodge on June 23 with 44 people attending. The speaker was from Ottawa from the Canada Safety Council, she is planning to work with the Haliburton County Home Support Services to arrange for classes for senior citizens to improve their driving skills before their 80th birthday test.

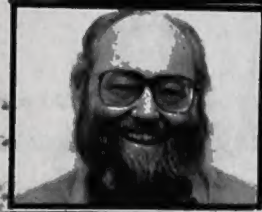

The Los Angeles Kings won the 1988 Molson Pro-Hockey Slo-Pitch Challenge Championship recently in Niagara Falls, Ontario and several people for West Guilford were there to see it. Carol Stamp, who was one of the spectators at the event, told me that Bernie Nicholls' brother Erin joined him and played for the Kings. Erin put up a very impressive showing when he hit eight home runs during the course of the tournament and was chosen the most valuable player in two of the games. Two cousins of Bernie Nicholls, namely Michael McKenzie, Mark Stamp and a nephew Darrell Upton had the honour of being bat boys for the Kings in their game against the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Holly Sisson of West Guilford, Bill Foote of Haliburton, Al Cooper, Lee Oaster and Phil Graham all of Minden members of the R.C.A.F. during the war attended the Number 4 Wireless School Reunion held at Guelph on June 24, 25 and 26.

Just a last minute reminder that the Blood Donor Clinic will be held at the Legion Hall in Haliburton on Tuesday July 12, from 2:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

SEVERAL YEARS ago, when New York City was trying to encourage their young people to 'Stay in School' they put posters in their Subway cars headed "I quit school when I wuz only 16."

It may have something to do with the profitable drug sub-culture there, or the love for graffiti in their public transit systems, but someone wrote underneath one of them: "...and now I am a millionaire."

Someone said that the trouble with writing about illiteracy is that the people who should be most interested won't be able to figure it out.

What he may have had in mind were the 1.6 million adults in Ontario who are considered to be illiterate. These are people who are not only unlikely to read a newspaper, but have trouble looking up a phone number, or filling out a form — or a job application.

Not only are these unfortunates unlikely to find a decent job, but The Canadian Business Task Force estimates that people who cannot read cost some $1.6 million a year in lost production and accidents here, and $4 billion across Canada.

The same outfit has calculated that illiteracy adds up to a $10 million dollar problem in this county, with much of that represented by the money lost by those who cannot hold a proper job because they simply cannot read.

It is a well known fact that the majority of those who populate our prisons are people whose problems began with the fact that they never learned to read properly. When they couldn't fake their way any further in school, they dropped out.

When they dropped out, they couldn't get a job, and if they got one they couldn't hold it. In many cases they quit because they didn't want to admit to others that they couldn't read.

The John Howard Society, which tries to get these people back into society in more useful roles, has recognized remedial English as a key to rehabilitation.

One of my sons was able to help in this respect by adapting a computerized typing course, designed for high school kids, to include words that would be more logical for adults coming out of jail to use. The computer offers some obvious shortcuts to upgrading reading skills.

A pioneer outfit in solving the problems of reading skills has been a unique Canadian non-profit group called Frontier College. This is a college with a history of more than 50 years but one without a single ivy-covered building.

It's faculty go out to the mines and the bush and with migrant farm workers and do the same jobs the workers do — for the same pay. After they've all done their day's work, the 'teacher,' often just out of school himself, teaches the basics of English to the others.

This year they are fighting their war on another front. Young children, many of whom have been brought up with the TV set as a babysitter, don't do well at reading if they don't get experience at an early age.

Frontier College believes that if the children look on books as friends, they will read because they enjoy it. If parents will read to the youngsters as part of their daily routine, they'll want to learn to read on their own.

To make up for this lack in so many homes, volunteers will be in parks, day camps, and malls around Toronto and other large centres, reading stories to the children and trying to get them 'hooked' on reading.

You may have seen some coverage during the Toronto Summit, showing the wives of the leaders taking turns reading stories to a group of school children. It came about because the head of the College approached Mila Mulroney for her support in 1986.

John O'Leary asked her if she would consider making story-reading a part of her appearances when she visited with children across the country, and she accepted. Her support got it the high-profile coverage as part of the summit last month.

Frankly, I cannot see anyone who enjoys reading for pleasure not wanting to encourage others — of any age — to develop whatever degree of skill is necessary. It is the sort of 'motherhood' issue that even politicians can grasp.

In the last provincial election, David Peterson declared: "...every man woman and child will have equal access to obtaining literacy skills."

Unfortunately, when it came to the last provincial budget, this promise joined a lot of others that were apparently written on the wind. There has not been one single dollar more allocated for these valuable programs.

Curiously, the government put out some big bucks to subsidize adult literacy programs, and were so successful that it has caused waiting lists for assistance to increase from 30 to 100 per cent. But that's only because they have reneged on the increase in funding needed to include the people the campaign has attracted in the program!

A group called the Ontario Literacy Coalition are committed to staying on the government's back until they keep this particular promise. I hope they succeed.

a letter of love, were red marks and an "F".

When young prisoners confessed to me in terror that the reason that they could not get work was that they were afraid of filling out application forms and being discovered to be illiterate, I fully understood. I remember one young man, mid-twenties I guess, who was in prison for blowing up armoured trucks. He had a following that would do anything he commanded. One day he began to shake and tears flowed into his eyes as he confessed his fear of writing and being discovered as a fraud. He unfolded a long story of chronic failure in school and his childhood attempts to master the grammatical rules and their exceptions.

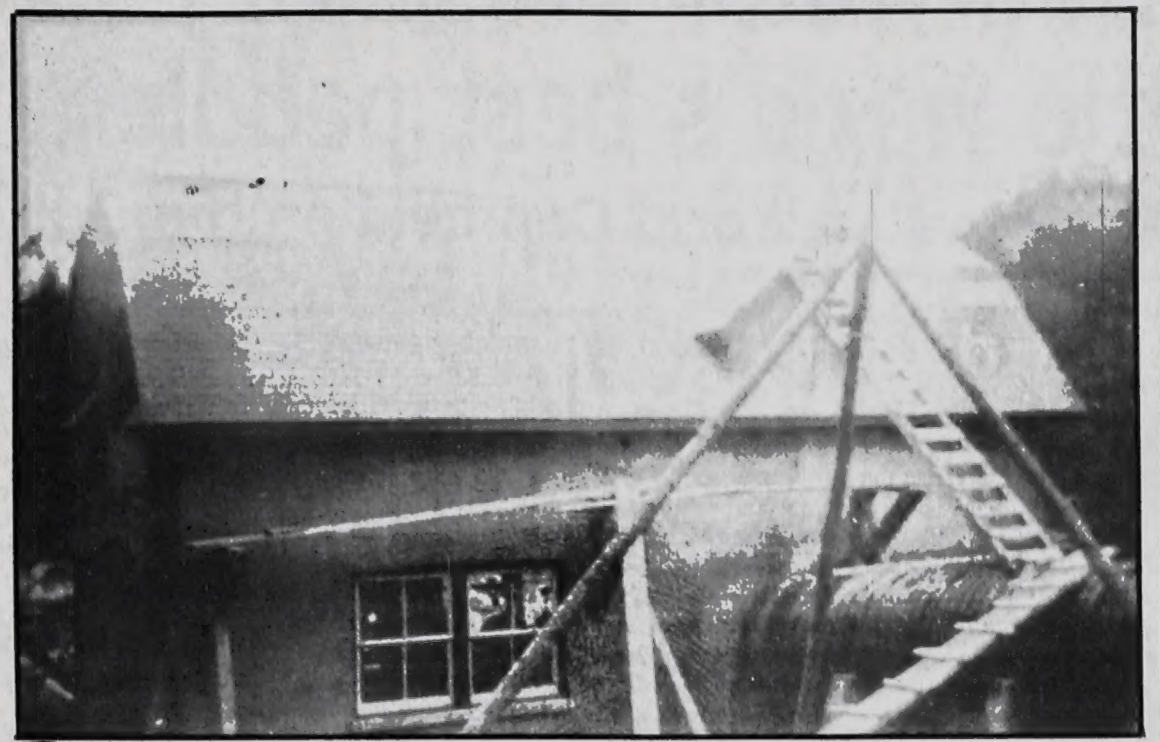

Unbelieving, I asked him to write something for me so that I could see for myself that what he was saying was true. Literally sweating and hands shaking he took almost an hour to write a short note in which he applied the exception to every grammatical rule every time. Stories of being ridiculed, feeling stupid and, because he was a foster child, feeling isolated in his struggle to learn a way to communicate successfully, followed. The core of a violent man's problem was clouded with a problem in language development! Together we worked on this, the blind leading the blind, until he gained enough confidence that he could work with an English teacher and get it right. To my knowledge, he has not blown up a Wells Fargo since and may even have a column in a local paper.

What we learned was that many young men and women have such a serious problem with self-expression, that the frustration and constant failure finally defeat them and they blow up! So that young prisoner and I worked hard with other prisoners to help them express themselves freely and confidently. When language isn't working for you, you are in big trouble in this world.

I wonder if English teachers know that they have this much power over us peasants for whom grammar is a strange mystery, and that only those with superior intelligence can grasp it — or perhaps those with powers of the occult.

I wonder if teachers of English language know how our words and the way we put them together are often acts of great courage of self-disclosure. I wonder if folks know that when we talk or write we are risking discovery of our true selves. Probably that is why many folks do not talk much or only quote clichés and never struggle to express the matters of the heart. Having spoken of the deepest things of the self, red marks teach more than they mean to.

In spite of my school-boyish fears, I have a hunch that the kind English teacher who spoke so appreciatively of my column had a deeper understanding of the human spirit than grammatical rules would allow. As a matter of fact now that I reflect about it, all of the English teachers I have ever known were incurable romantics! Wistful poets, all! I wonder why they or grammar itself mystifies children so?

The Dysart municipal electric plant was completed in 1928 and served the village of Haliburton until the end of World War II when it was sold to W.O. Bailey and Sons. Ontario Hydro then took over providing electrical power to the area. Jimmie McCormick was among the early managers of the plant, and during the 1930's and 40's Wes Parish was the manager. He is still remembered by many people. W.R. Curry was the Reeve of Dysart at the time and served as Chairman of the Dysart Electric Light Company while it was being planned and constructed on the Drag River. The river was dammed and the water taken to the generators by the wooden flumes pictured here. Prior to this development, the town was at first lit by lamps. Later on, electrical power was provided from 4:00 p.m. to midnight by a steam engine in Carew's Mill. George Thayer Sr. looked after the steam engine. Lakings' and Hoxies' were among the first to receive electrical power in their homes. By the time the Drag River was harnessed, much of the town was wired. For one year, prior to 1928, power was generated at Bolender's Mill in town. Down in the dumps—at the dump

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

OF ALL THE DAYS it could have happened, that day was probably the worst. It started out fine and comfortable with a nice little breeze off the lake and the odd fluff of cloud lazily across the sky. Not hot. Not yet.

Maggie decided she just had to go to the dump that day. She had put it off and put it off until there was nowhere else to keep the garbage. It had taken over the back porch and the stench of it in the recent heat wave had started to seep into the cottage. The raccoons had been digging at the screen door trying to get at it. She had heard them the night before. So since the weather seemed to have broken somewhat—for who wants to go to the dump in that heat—she loaded the five kids into the car, stuffed the trunk with heavy, lumpy bags of garbage and set off. She had to go into town to shop anyway, so she thought she'd go to the Scotch Line dump. In those days you just tossed your refuse onto the pile. There were no signs, no separate areas.

As she turned off the sidewalk onto the highway, she noticed the trees were still, the sky clear and the temperature had started to rise. "Damn," thought Maggie. "It's going to be another scorcher after all." But she had come this far so she might as well continue and get the job over with. The kids, all girls, were squirming and teasing in the car. They kept pulling the youngest one's braids. Kate, being the smallest, never got to sit in the front seat because she was about the size of a pea and that would waste too much seating space. The others lorded it over her, but she was an agreeable little thing and took it well. Years later she would have her revenge, but that's another story.

They were all a bit hyped up because they loved going to the dump, though it was better at night with the bears. And they liked going into town because they could go off on their own for a while and spend their allowances. So while they youngsters were happy and excited, Maggie was dreading the hot smelly dump and the hot crowded stores.

A few warnings from Maggie to "settle down" and they arrived at the dump. It was hot, the sand where she pulled the car up was as fine as face powder and the flies buzzed and swarmed around the mounds of rotting food piled high. She opened the trunk and started lugging the bags over to add to the heap. The kids wanted to come out but she said no, they were wearing their sandals and they might step on some broken glass. The smell was awful and as Maggie carried each bag over to the spot she felt like gagging at the stench.

When the job was done, she climbed back into the car and reached for the key. It wasn't in the ignition. Cursing under her breath, she climbed back out into the smelly heat to retrieve them from the trunk's lock. They weren't there. Starting to feel a bit nervous, Maggie ran her hand into her pocket. Nothing. Maybe the other pocket. No.

And then she remembered. She had unlocked the trunk, placed the keys to the side of the first bag so she would have both hands free to lift it out. She had been such a hurry to get the garbage unloaded and herself out of the swarming, sweltering spot that she had picked up the last bag, a light one, with one hand and slammed the trunk shut with her other. The keys were now locked in the trunk.

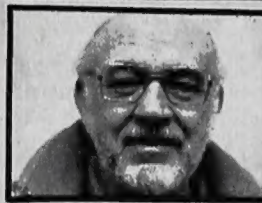

"It stinks here Mom. Can we go now?" asked Kate as Maggie opened the car door.

"The keys are locked in the trunk and I've got to go get someone to help us," Maggie told them.

English teachers and their red pens

AS OTHERS SEE IT

GOOD GRIEF! An English teacher has been reading my columns! When he introduced himself and said he was glad to meet me I was flattered. Especially since he seemed very positive and quite insightful about me and my stuff, but then he said he taught English. No matter what he said in a positive vein after that I was living with terror and awaiting the axe that only English teachers can wield. It never came, but I kept waiting and expecting it. I was rushing through column after column correcting spelling, grammatical errors and trying to figure out which punctuation should have been where. He was very kind and gracious. I was an intimidated school boy inside.

I can't spell rite. I can't punctuate properly. I knew that he probably used my column as a bad example of oops, of an example of bad grammar for his students. I can talk. I can make myself understood that is. But when I write I put down what I would say and try to figure out what commas and colons make things sound like I'm saying them. That doesn't work out with English grammar.

I've seen folks in the congregation groan when my speech was so terribly ungrammatical that it split infinity. When I write, unless Betty corrects everything, it looks like a disaster. After I got my Doctorate, folks thought my bad grammar was deliberate and so they laughed 'with' me. It was a good cover.

The nice English teacher kept going on about how much he like my columns, but I was as intimidated as I felt in Public School. Even when I went to the schools when my kids were there, I felt like a bad boy who was about to do something remarkably stupid. The buildings overwhelmed me and talking with their teachers was like I deserved a tongue-lashing. Hands sweating, shifting from one foot to the other, eyes glancing to the door, I would try to hear what they were saying about my kids and not about me. Sometimes I suspected that the teachers set it up that way, to make parents feel dumb and ignorant. But mostly, it was my problem. I fully expected my kids' teacher to pull out of the desk drawer the essay I wrote on Charles Lamb years ago that was covered with red marks. In the essay I had poured out my soul about Lamb's disappointing and heart breaking love affair and what I got was a bunch of red marks! I was so embarrassed that I promised myself that I would never tell my heart in school again, especially if I was in love with the teacher. That lovely, young English teacher, flowing blond hair and sighing poetic kindness had won my heart, but all she could put on my essay, which was secretly

THERE IS HOPE for the future in Haliburton. Sometimes I get so distressed when I see the village trying to become something it isn't that I wonder where this place of beauty and serenity will end up in another decade. Some people seem to think that the way to get people up here is to make it look as much like the city they left behind as possible and destroy the peace and quiet in order to achieve it. Instead of taking advantage of all the natural benefits the Highlands has to offer people who need an escape from bricks and crowds and rush hours and alienation, they want to re-create it.

But then I go to events like West Guilford's Canada Day celebration. There are no bright lights (unless you count the fireworks), no gimmicks, and no fast ways to lose a few dollars. But it's so much fun.

If you went to the Canadian National Exhibition, would you be able to see a tiny girl try to hold up the legs of another tiny girl in their belief they really can win the wheelbarrow race? (The strain proved too much. The wheelbarrow's elbows collapsed and the pusher collapsed on her back.) Or could you sit down for a chat with the two ladies who were born month apart from one another in the year 1900? Would Miss Canada blush from all the attention? Would youngsters be satisfied with the grand prize of a sucker shaped like a ring?

Oh but it's not really sophisticated, the detractors might say. People from the city might call us hicks if we seem to enjoy the simple pleasures of life. If this is the case, why is Guilford's Canada Day becoming more and more popular every year—and that means more people 'from away' are attending? I think it has something to do with the fact people are yearning for the simple things in life in a world which is getting more complex and confusing.

Canada Day is just a case in point. I really enjoy watching the frog races at the Monmouth Agricultural Fair and wondering what goat has the most well-turned ankle. The shock of coming into sleeping little Wilberforce when Country Good Times hits town is worth the price of admission. The County Fair gets better every year, with the heritage tents providing me with the most enjoyment. Never was one for having my stomach turned upside down on the midway rides. And then there's Stanhope Fun Day. The people in the advertising department of the Echo were asked to concentrate on cats and dogs in the upcoming ad, for when the day arrives, the big attraction will be the pet contests. I think that's truly wonderful, when people can get their name in the paper just because their dog is the tiniest or muttiest. Then there's this fall's studio tour—perfect.

When I look at what is happening to some of the other events, I feel like going up to the organizers of the events I like and saying—DON'T EVER CHANGE. Please don't think we have to compete with the glitz of urban centres. Please don't think you need a lot of showbiz to have fun. Please let me enjoy Haliburton for what it is—a collection of small communities whose residents know that when you're living in one of the prettiest parts of the country, Nature and Beauty can sell themselves.

Wild Water Preserve hosts the world's best paddlers

White water World Cup held on the Gull

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

Eighty five racers from around the world converged on Minden's Wild Water Preserve on Friday and Saturday to compete in the third leg of the World Cup for Kayak and Canoe White Water Slalom.

The action was fast and furious as the racers shot down the rapids along the 600 metre course, battling both the turbulent water and the strong currents. Just as in ski slalom, the paddlers had to negotiate a series of gates at high speed with the fastest time winning. Six of the gates were upstream, meaning the paddlers had to fight the tremendous current to pass through the gate.

In the men's K1 kayak class, Richard Fox of Great Britain captured top spot with a time of 197.68 seconds on his second run. Countryman Melvyn Jones came in second with a time of 200.70 sec. and France's Laurent Aud came in third with a time of 201.31.

In the men's canoe class, C1, it was the United States' turn to capture the gold and silver. Americans Jed Prentice and Jon Luginbill finished one and two with the respective times of 214.49 sec and 216.57 sec. But Yugoslavia was not far behind as Jose Vidmar paddled into a very close third with a time of 216.73 sec.

In the women's kayak, France took a turn at occupying the two top spots. Marie Grange Prigent and Myriam Jerusalem, currently second in the world in this class, finished with times of 228.11 sec and 231.18 sec. American Cathy Hearn, who is also vying for the top spot in the world, came in third with a time of 234.70.

And in perhaps the most exciting class, the C2 two-man canoe, the American team came away with two more victories. The team of Jamie McEwan and Lecky Haller got the gold after a run of 233.99 sec. The French captured another second place medal behind the paddling of Michel Saidi and Jerome Daval, in a time of 236.46 sec. The boat of Scott Strausbaugh and Joe Jacobi won the Americans their second medal in this class with a third place time of 240.60 sec.

Jim Krueger, the media representative for the event, says between 2000 and 3000 people lined the banks of the Gull to watch the race on Saturday. Many of them were awed by the beautiful combination of raw power and finesse that this sport entails. Krueger says the event was very successful and showed the world that Minden could support a world class event such as the World Cup.

Many of the racers themselves commented on the quality of the course. They said it was one of the best and most challenging they had ever paddled.

Saturday's race may have been a preview for the 1992 Olympics, where white water slalom will be an official medal event. Many of the racers seen here will likely compete in '92. But perhaps most significantly, if Toronto is successful in getting the 1996 Olympic games, the Wild Water preserve and Minden will most likely be picked as the sight for the white water slalom, says Krueger.

This race was the third in a series of seven which determines the World Cup standings.

The Rockcliffe hitters were hot on Monday night as this lady at left demonstrated. They took advantage of Haliburton's fielding mistakes and ran up an impressive 8-2 lead. They held on, despite a last inning come back from Haliburton. The final score was 8-6

Injuries and absences help send Haliburton to its defeat, 8 to 6

Sometimes your hot, sometimes your not. On Monday night in Minden, the lately hot Haliburton Ladies Softball team suddenly cooled down. They lost to the Rockcliffe by a score of 8 to 6 in an up and mostly down game.

When it started off, it looked as though it was going to be a good close game. Marcy Severin retired the first three batters she faced and Haliburton scored two runs. But after that, the Rockcliffe took over and began to really bang away at Haliburton's usually good defense.

Come-back bid is not enough for Haliburton

Haliburton, who were missing some players to injuries and absences, made a lot of mistakes in the field and then couldn't make up for them at the plate. By the seventh inning, Rockcliffe had a commanding 8 to 2 lead.

Then Haliburton began another of their famous come-from-behind attempts. But it was too little too late. They managed to score four more runs but the winning run was thrown out at first to end the game. The final score, Rockcliffe 8, Haliburton 6.

The Warriors played a good game Thursday but couldn't pull off the win

Loss ends Warriors win streak

by JAY KERR-WILSON

Staff reporter

The Haliburton Warriors Men's Fastball team failed to make it two wins in a row against the Minden men on Thursday despite a seventh inning rally.

Pitching was strong for both teams and no runners crossed the plate until the fifth inning. Minden's lead off batter Doug Shaw singled then stole second and third. He came home on a sacrifice fly to open the scoring. The Warriors went down in order in their half of the sixth and Minden went to bat and added two more runs in the bottom of the sixth to make it 3-0 Minden.

The Warriors took their last at bats determined to "put their rally caps on". And they almost made it. Three hits by John Ballantyne, Rod Sisson and Greg Scheffee produced two runs but that's the best the Warriors could do, losing the game 3-2. The game was marred by some controversial officiating but Haliburton's Steve Lustig and Minden's Brian Shaw provided strong pitching and both defenses kept the game tight.

The Warriors loss ends a three game winning streak that began when they beat Lindsay's Kent Tavern on June 19. They beat the Lindsay team again on June 23 3-0, and beat the first place Minden team last Tuesday also by a 3-0 score.

The Warriors have six games left in their regular season plus two make-up games yet to be scheduled. This weekend the team will be in Harcourt for a tournament. The remaining scheduled Warrior games are:

- Sun. July 10, in Lindsay against Town Rent All
- Thurs. July 14 at home to Lindsay's Kent Tavern
- Sun. July 17 away at Woodville
- Thurs. July 21 at home against Bobcaygeon
- Thurs. July 28 away at Minden and
- Tues. Aug. 2 at home against the Bowlaway Trojans from Lindsay.

Haliburton trounces Bracebridge to tune of 3 to 0

by MIKE PARK

Staff reporter

The Haliburton Dixie Lee Soccer Club battled to a 3 to 0 win over the Bracebridge Juniors in a hard fought and sometimes vicious game.

Haliburton's experience and trademark game of ball control was simply too much for the Juniors, who were playing pretty well on raw talent alone. They became frustrated in the second half and two of their players received red cards. At one point, after Paul Milne collided with the Junior's goalie, there was a five player pile up in front of the Bracebridge net. At times the game more closely resembled Aussie Rules Football than soccer.

The Bracebridge frustration seemed well founded. Haliburton's defense allowed only three good scoring opportunities during the entire game while at the same time they themselves had a number of goochances to score. The roughness of the match didn't bother Haliburton as much as it probably should have.

Paul Milne scored the first goal on a great dribbling play between two defensemen. He shot the

Achenbachs 'nurse' plants to maturity

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff reporter

WHOEVER CAME UP with the idea of calling greenhouses "nurseries" certainly knew what they were talking about. The "parents" of thousands of plants and flowers, Karl Heinz and Elke Achenbach have had to get up in the early hours of the night to attend to their little ones' needs, nurture each of them along with a kind heart and a gentle touch, protect them from harmful outsiders and worry about what's going to happen to them when they grow up.

But, like most other parents, the Achenbachs don't focus on how much work is involved in plant-rearing. It's a labour of love, and their main reward is to see their plants grow up to be healthy, strong individuals who can give a lot of happiness to someone else.

In Irondale, just past the gas station, is a long row of greenhouses. Passersby during the last five years have watched the length of the greenhouse blossom just as much as the flowers it houses. First it was a red metal hut with some shelves covered by red plastic on the outside. Then the metal rib cages of the first real "greenhouse" were arched above the ground like the skeleton of a whale and covered with plastic. Since then, two more greenhouses have been added and the Achenbachs would like to add on another one, sometime in the future as business warrants the expansion. It's the little greenhouse that grew, right where no one else would ever have given it a chance.

Struggling with the weather

"Maybe if I had lived five or 20 years in Canada, I never would have done it," says Mr. Achenbach, looking back on the struggle of growing delicate plants in an area where the weather fluctuates greatly from day to day, season to season. When he and his wife emigrated from Germany five years ago, they could have moved to the St. Catharines area, where the climate is far more tolerant of gardeners. But in St. Catharines there are lots of other greenhouses which have been established for years and they would be faced with heavy competition right from the start.

Instead, a friend in Kinmount showed them some property on this somewhat lonely stretch of highway between Kinmount and Gooderham. The Achenbachs had the whole area to themselves. As they would say, no one else would be foolish enough to think they could make a living growing flowers in the Highlands.

But when you walk through their greenhouses, pleasantly greeted by the shroud of moist, sweet-smelling air, all you can see is this riot of colours. Purples, pinks, greens, yellows, fuchsia—a natural rainbow in colours so rich, only nature could produce them.

Yet if nature were left on its own, these colours never would have seen the light of day. Plants can be very temperamental and react quickly to any inhospitable conditions—a natural occurrence in the Highlands. Many plant owners recognize the signs of death and vow not to kill the next bit of greenery. However, when plants are your business as well as your pleasure, one can't afford to let the weather be the boss.

In the greenhouses are old wood stoves which the Achenbachs have salvaged and had repaired. With 55 acres of their own land, they have a ready supply of the wood to fuel them, churning out the heat no matter what the temperature.

Yet on those really cold nights in the winter, Mr. Achenbach has had to get up two or three times, bundle up and walk the 300 metres down to the greenhouse to stoke the woodstove. They simply cannot afford to let one cold night ruin their prospects for a summer and unless they want to spend a lot more money on heating, it's an inconvenience they'll have to endure.

"It's better to be a little careful because you sleep more quietly," says Mr. Achenbach.

Because the greenhouse is their only advertising, they have to keep it near the highway and make the frequent trips between the house and plants. However, Mr. Achenbach would like to build a smaller greenhouse near the house for those few months when the seedlings are small and do not require a lot of room—just warmth.

Risks from the wind

With its northern exposure, the wind also poses a difficult problem, and the Achenbachs are constantly thinking of ways they can adapt the greenhouse to provide more protection from all the elements. For instance, in the winter, a covering of mesh is placed between the outside plastic

'It's better to be a little careful because you sleep more quietly,' say Karl Heinz and Elke Achenbach and the plants. When there's a frost, it forms on the mesh, not the plants. The problem in the summer is that it gets too hot. With temperatures which go from one extreme to another—minus 30 in the winter and a sweltering 30 in the summer—a lot of time is spent preparing for the changes in weather.

As the plants grow, they make a westward journey from one section of the greenhouse to another, depending on how warm they have to be kept. Each plant has its own likes and dislikes and the Achenbachs draw on their experience to create the proper environment. Where Mother Nature refuses to co-operate, their determination and hard work fills the void.

The Achenbachs suggest that the new plant owners have the same practice of moving plants around from year to year. It's not good to have the same plants in the same spot every season, and people should give the soil a helping hand by not demanding the same things of it each year.

They might also take a page out of the Achenbach's book and make their own topsoil, only it would be a good idea to ask their advice first, something which they are only too willing to give out for free.

"With peat moss, the plants go fast but then there's no fertilizer and the plant dies fast," he explains. In the fall, he mixes in some cow manure and "for thousands of plants you need a big hill of topsoil."

These chores are done ahead of time to allow the Achenbachs more spare time in the spring for such things as eating and sleeping. As time progresses, they learn how to save themselves time, a precious commodity when there's just the two of them watching over their brood.

There doesn't seem to be enough time in the summer to handle all the demands on the business. A couple of years ago, Mr. Achenbach started going to a farmers market in Cobocok on weekends and now that it has closed down, he will have a stand on the highway. This means they both must serve the customers by themselves and as luck would have it, they may not see a soul for half an hour and then 10 cars are parked in front of them.

It's important for them to spend time with each of their customers, helping them with their selection if they're novices, or providing advice even the more experienced green thumb can appreciate. You don't send your children out with no advice of what to beware of and what is considered good behaviour.

"It's very important to have good looking plants," the Achenbachs add. When the spring

Stores can't sell tobacco to minors

by MIKE PARK
Staff reporter

The Retail Council of Canada has launched a major information campaign to remind store owners and retailers that it is illegal to sell cigarettes to anyone under the age of 18, in Ontario.

The campaign is also being backed by five other grocery retail and merchandising companies. They are sending information kits and decals to stores around Ontario and they hope to reach nearly 38,000 employees with their message.

The Minors Protection Act, R.S.O. 1970, states that "no person shall either directly or indirectly sell or give or furnish to a child under 18 years of age cigarettes, cigars, or tobacco in any form."

This means it is even illegal to give some one under 18 a pack of smokes. The fine for breaking the law ranges between $2 to $100. The Retail Council of Canada want stores and their employees to remember that.

Unfortunately, for a law that has been on the books for over 18 years itself, no one seems to know about it.

At the Jug City in Haliburton, the two employees thought they couldn't sell to anyone under the age of 16. They had no idea about the 18-year-old provincial statute and have been following an under 16 policy. They thought that an under 18 policy would be hard to enforce because, to them a lot of 16-year-olds and 18-year olds look alike. One woman said the restriction probably wouldn't do any good.

"If they're (teenagers under 18) going to smoke, they're going to smoke," said one employee flatly.

At Mike's Milk on Highland Street in Haliburton, the employee on the evening shift on Monday said he knew about the law. He thought it was a great idea but agreed with Jug City that the law would be hard to enforce. He said often, kids would get a note from their parents, and Mike's would sell to them. He suspects that sometimes the notes aren't real. He too thought it would be difficult to distinguish between 16 and 18 year olds.

Most places, like the Jug City, thought the law said 16 years of age, not 18. This is the federal statute and the province of Ontario's law stating 18 as the legal age over-rides it.

The Retail Council of Canada is spending more than $400,000 across Canada to get their message out.

Working with flowers part of the Achenbachs' nature

air is inspiring local gardeners, they don't want to travel to the greenhouse just to be told these green leaves will one day sprout beautiful flowers. They want that colour and vibrancy now. They also don't want to see any dead leaves marring the picture so Mrs. Achenbach's hands are constantly on the move, gently pruning away. One of the things you'll notice about the greenhouse, however, is how neat it is. There is hardly a leaf out of place and everything is bright and orderly.

Ideas and hard work

"Ideas are important, then hard work. Nothing comes alone," says Mr. Achenbach of why the business has flourished. Nature is constantly changing and if you want to be successful in harnessing some of that movement, you have to be willing to change yourself.

Change is something the Achenbachs accept with confidence. It's been difficult to make a new life and new business in a new country, but if they hadn't taken the step to immigrant five years ago, then they would have been locked into a lifestyle with little promise of change.

Near Hamburg, West Germany, the Achenbachs owned another greenhouse, only this time they sold most of their plants to flower shops and retailers. Both of them have difficulties in explaining why they found themselves working with flowers in the first place—it just seems part of their nature.

But then the oil prices went up and it was becoming increasingly expensive to heat the greenhouse. They had no room in which to grow, nor would they ever be able to add onto their business in the ways they would have liked to.

Her grandfather had told them about how beautiful Canada was and since they had a friend who sold real estate in Kinmount, this was how they chose their new home. They knew very little English, but fortunately, plants are identified by their Latin names and everyone has fun twisting their tongues around those pronunciations.

"I like the area but I cannot tell why," Mrs. Achenbach says of her impressions since moving here. "For sure the nature is the important thing."

They also found how beautiful the neighbours could be. Everyone was so helpful and considerate and when the Achenbachs opened for the first season, it was the neighbours who directed most of the customers their way.

That first winter, the Achenbachs concentrated on their home and learning English. The building at the back of the lot was just a frame and it was their responsibility to make it a home. There was no electricity, no running water, and the Achenbachs had a taste of what new settlers years before them had had to face. But gradually everything began to take shape and by that spring, they were ready to drive to Peterborough to pick up their first truckload of plants. That summer they made four more trips and on their fifth visit, the supplier had nothing to sell them.

The Achenbachs had not made enough money that summer to tide them through the winter so Mr. Achenbach was only a bit hesitant to accept an offer of employment working with a timber cutting crew. "Why do you come to the small gardener?" when there are so many big Canadians around, he wondered, appreciating the offer none the less.

At first he didn't expect to last longer than three days, but he ended up spending three months in the bush, watching and listening to the more experienced woodcutters. However, "the most important thing was I met Canadians and if I need their help," he now knows who to call. "One hand helps the other hand."

That experience has proved profitable in more ways than one. In the fall, Mr. Achenbach sells his wood, "but only what I can do with two hands." There's the preparations for spring which tide him through the rest of the winter and they both find enough to keep busy. She worked in a flower shop before and makes arrangements to sell as Christmas and Easter gifts and there are those regular trips down to the wood stoves in the greenhouses.

"Straight forward, that's how I moved my whole lifetime," says Mr. Achenbach of how he's too busy to be unemployed or worrying about the future. "Sometimes it was difficult but I kept looking forward."

Judging by the way the Achenbachs have made their business a success so far, they can look forward to the joys of parenting for many years yet to come.

Win moves Haliburton into first place spot ball low and beat the net-minder clean. Mike Blake came back from one excellent scoring chance to add Haliburton's second goal in the first half. He too beat the goalie on a low shot.

Haliburton faced the wind in the second half but they were still unrelenting. Al Joplin wrapped the game up with his first goal of the season, as Haliburton out-played the Juniors in a 3 to 0 win.

Haliburton is now tied for first place with the Bracebridge Centennials, who dealt them their only loss earlier in the season, 3 to 0. And this Sunday, these two teams will meet again in what will probably be Haliburton's greatest test so far this year. They want a lot of fans to support them in this important game at Archie Stouffer Public School at 1:00 p.m. on Sunday.

This is the team's best start in six years, with a record of 5-2-1.

Being small has its good parts too

DOWN OUR ROAD

with a set face. "No, you can't come. You have to stay here. There's too much traffic on the road and I don't want to have to worry about all of you."

Over the groans she told them to stay in the car, she'd be back as soon as she could, and she set off. "Too much traffic—ha!" she thought as she walked down Scotch Line Road. Not a car in sight. "Everyone's probably sitting by their lakes and out of this heat." The road was rocky and uneven and the sun beat down on her hatless head like an accusation. Why, oh why, did this have to happen? And of all places to lock the keys in the trunk. And on such a merciless hot day to bot. Lost in her thoughts for a moment, she missed the car until it had sped past her. She waved but they didn't see her.

Now she was at the highway. Well there would be more cars here. She waved at the first one, but it was going too fast and never even looked her way. A blue station wagon was coming towards her and she waved frantically. They all smiled and waved back and kept on going. A beat-up old brown pickup was bumping along and in desperation Maggie practically stepped into its path, arms flapping over her head. The truck pulled over and an elderly man in coveralls got out.

Maggie ran over to him and told her story. He said he'd get someone from the garage down the highway to come out and get the trunk open for her. With a somewhat lighter heart, she trudged all the way back to the dump. The kids were still in the car alright, but there faces were flushed from the heat, hair plastered against their faces and necks. They looked forlorn and droopy, like little wilted petunias lined up on the back seat.

A few minutes later the man from the garage arrived. "Don't worry," he told Maggie, "One of these is bound to fit." He held up a huge wire circle packed with keys of every shape and size. Patiently, bent over in the sun, he tried the keys. Every single one. None would open the trunk. When he finally straightened up, Maggie could see two streams making their way down the sides of his face.

He asked if there was another way to get into the trunk and she told him she thought there was an opening behind the back seat. The kids were allowed out of the car so the seat could be removed. Sure enough there was a small space and it did lead back into the trunk. But the man's arm, even extended as far as his shoulder would permit, was not long enough.

It was becoming a nightmare and looking at the garage man, for a moment Maggie thought he's give up and leave she and the five kids there to the flies, the gulls and the stink.

"Someone's going to have to crawl in there and get the keys," he told her. "It's the only way. But it has to be someone small enough to fit in through there," he continued, indicating an area a bit bigger than a crack. All eyes turned to Kate. As usual, she was game, eager to please. Maggie looked at the new yellow and white shorts set. Will they ever be clean again, she wondered to herself, distractedly.

But it wasn't going to be easy yet. Kate managed to get halfway in but her clothes kept catching and stopping her progress. "The clothes will have to come off, Kate," Maggie told her daughter firmly.

"But Mom," replied the child, looking at the man from the garage. After a short consultation, he walked to the front of the car and turned his back, and Kate, clad only in her underwear, the man's lighter clutched in one small hand, started wiggling through the opening. It was a tight fit but she made it through. After a few clicks with the lighter, she spotted the keys and backed out of the trunk, feet first.

Streaked with grease and dirt, Kate emerged triumphant. She stood there a second, keys still clenched in her fist, hair stringy, the braids half-undone, and a fine beaded line of moisture across her upper lip.

She looked at the four older, bigger girls clustered around her, then at Maggie who was ready to give the child a great big bear hug.

"Here you go Mom," Kate said, her voice busting with pride. "Being small has its good parts too, right you guys?"

From the dump they went straight to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream cones. Kate got a large one.

Man flown to Toronto after two-car accident

Three people were injured in a two car accident on highway 503 west of Gooderham on Canada Day morning at about 5:00 a.m.

Joao Arruda, 22, of Cambridge was stopped on the east-bound shoulder of the road while he was checking the oil in his car. Another car suddenly sideswiped Arruda's car and then rolled onto its side and slid along the highway.

James D. Hunter, 20, of Gooderham, has been charged with Careless Driving. Hunter, Arruda, and a passenger in Hunter's car were injured in the accident. Arruda later had to be airlifted to a Toronto hospital.

OMB hearing set for IGA-school dispute

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

The date for the Ontario Municipal Board hearing to decide on whether Dollo's IGA in Minden will be used as classroom space has been set for July 19.

The board of education wants to use the vacant store made a temporary annex to Archie Stouffer Elementary School to relieve the school's overcrowded conditions. Some members of the community are opposed to the plan and at least two objections have been filed forcing the OMB hearing.

Joe Shapiera is a real estate developer who owns four stores near the Minden IGA and one of the opponents of the school board's proposal. He wants the space used for commercial enterprises.

The school board has said that if the OMB's decision goes against them they may have to sacrifice some programs like shop and home economics in order to accommodate the more than 500 students who will be attending Archie Stouffer this year.

The architect, the planner and the Fire Marshall have all said that the IGA could be turned into classroom space with very few changes.

The school board wants to avoid using portables because they could adversely affect the chances of getting funding for permanent expansion in years to come.

Bell comfortable despite strike

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

The management at Bell Canada says it's holding up "very well" going into the second week of the strike being staged by the company's operators and technicians.

The duties normally performed by the 20,000 striking workers is now being done by 6,000 managers.

Geoff Matthews, a spokesman for Bell's Public Affairs office, says service will improve as the managers become more comfortable with their new assignments. He says there is still a lapse in operator assisted calls and customers may be answered by a recorded message especially during busy periods. He also says Haliburton is no worse off than the rest of Ontario as far as delays in service goes.

Matthews says installation calls are also lagging behind because the company has given priority to repair calls. Matthews says a rash of vandalism of Bell equipment broke out in the Pembroke region and consisted primarily of phone cables being chopped up. He says the OPP is investigating the incidences and if the culprit(s) is discovered charges will be laid.

According to Matthews the union and management are not presently talking and to his knowledge no talks have been scheduled. He said the talks broke up on June 24 when union negotiators left the table and called the strike which began on Monday.

Matthews says the union rejected

Board to debate trustee formula

People and consideration by a committee that included the presidents of the five provincial trustee organizations.

There are presently 15 trustees sitting on the Haliburton County Board of Education. By the provisions of the new bill the board's base number would be 13 (12 regular trustees plus one separate school trustee) but they would have the option of adding or subtracting one or two trustees provided the variation receives 75 per cent of the board's support.

The new formula is based on the number of permanent residents and summer residents will no longer count towards a municipality's population when calculating the representation it will have on the board of education.

The new formula has been protested by smaller municipalities, led by Laxton, Digby and Longford, who fear that by losing their cottage assessment their representation will be drastically reduced, by up to 50 percent in some cases.

Before the end of the summer the board of education must collect enumeration data and together with the clerks of the three largest townships, Dysart et al, Anson-Hindon and Minden, and Lutterworth, must determine the distribution of the trustees. The board must also decide if it wishes to alter the number of trustees or distribution and make the appropriate applications.

If two municipalities do not have sufficient population to warrant even one trustee each they may combine their two populations and share a trustee provided they share a common boundary.

Guild is ready for 23rd Summer Sale and Show

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

Preparations are under way for Friday night's opening of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts Summer Exhibition and Sale in the gymnasium at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School.

The 115 exhibits will be judged on Friday morning and the awards will be presented at the official opening which starts at 7:30 p.m. Friday night.

The exhibit will feature arts and crafts, paintings, jewelry, metal work, pottery and fashion show

There are local exhibitors as well as some from as far away as British Columbia.

Organizers began planning the show in January by contacting potential exhibitors and sending out applications. Cecile McLeod, manager of the show, and Claire MacLeod, artistic convenor says that with out the help of the hundreds of volunteers the exhibition would not be possible. The show has to be set up in just four days, the work started on Monday and must be finished in time for the judging on Friday morning.

The exhibit will feature various forms of arts and crafts including paintings, jewellery, metal work, knitting, pottery, quilting, sculpture, weaving and woodwork. The theme of this year's sale is Artisan Muse. Cardboard facsimiles of store fronts have been placed throughout the gym bearing the names of the different types of exhibits. The idea is to group like art forms in one area and not mix them up as much as previous years.

There will be a fashion show on Saturday July 16 at 2:00 p.m. and the Guild is raffling off a canoe and a quilt. Last year over 5,000 people examined the exhibits. One thousand of those came on the first Saturday. According to McLeod, "everybody's welcome."

Cecile McLeod and Claire MacLeod

Levels still declining

The dry spell which we entered into a month ago continues to result in large declines of lake levels throughout the reservoir region of the Trent watershed. Reservoir levels averaged 86.5 percent on June 20, a considerable loss of 6 percent from the previous week and already are five percent below the 10 year average.

Releases from the Gull, Burnt, Mississauga and Eels Rivers have maintained the Kawartha Lakes at or near the maximum of their navigation ranges resulting in favourable boating conditions along the Waterway.

Outflows on the Otonabee and Trent Rivers are at their minimum for the third consecutive week and will very likely remain set there as long as precipitation totals are below normal.

Volunteer firemen valiant

MORE LETTERS

Echo readers write...

To the Editor:

On June 20 a major fire starts in a bush at Head Lake, Norland. Men are called from their work to risk their lives to help put this fire out. Several Volunteer Fire Departments, the Ministry of Natural Resources and local people were working together to fight the fire, including women on the fire phones and radios.

More than 100 are fighting. As they get one spot under control the fire jumps and it starts in another spot. The risk of it jumping behind them and entrapping them is very great.

As the sun sets the men return home exhausted, then they are up again at 5:00 a.m. to start all over again.

For five days the Laxton Volunteer Fire Fighters work with the Ministry of Natural Resources to keep the fire under control, the men taking turns so they can return to work to make their living. They now have to keep water on the hot spots or it will flare up again.

When I first heard of the fire I feared for people living close by and for every man helping to fight this fire. When I came up north for the weekend I was very proud of all the work these men had done. I thought everyone else would be also, but I was wrong. I should have known better. Every time there is a fire I hear the same thing. What took them so long? They didn't need all those men or there wasn't enough men. What happens if there is a fire here, there is no one to help us while they are up at Head Lake? I wonder if every time there is a fire in Norland the people in Head Lake complain.

You never hear of the places they save only the one's they lost.

Do you know what a Volunteer Fire Fighter is?

A Volunteer: They don't make their living at this. They get up at all hours of the night in all kinds of weather to fight a fire, go home for an hours sleep and then go to their full time job. They don't do this for fun, they do it to help you and me when we need them.

If everyone who was so quick to criticize, got together to help the fire fighters or become Volunteers themselves then they would realize what it's all about.

Let's try to help, not discourage these men or they will end up giving up all together and then what would you do when a fire starts near your home?

Judy Lecraw,
Toronto, Ontario.

Right on

To the Editor:

The article by Helen Robertson of June 15 is right on, but cats as pets should also be included. Humming birds, Northern Thrush and the American Goldfinch have disappeared from our area. The cats having raided their nests. They don't seem to interfere with black birds or species one can do without.

Yours very truly,
Penny Whiting,
Minden.

Businesses beware:OPP

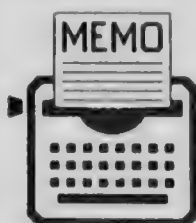

The Minden OPP is warning businessmen in the area to beware of people attempting to sell them advertising space on tourist maps. The ads are supposed to border the maps. The culprits usually target resorts, marinas and area retail outlets. They usually ask for cheques or cash in the full amount of the "sale" prior to the delivery of the maps.

Entrepreneurs in the area are advised to be very cautious and notify the OPP of any suspicious business activity.

Bell is ready to 'hold out'

Bell's offer so management feels the next move is up to the workers. "We feel we made a fair offer in all aspects, including enshrined pension indexes and wage increases and we were disappointed when they rejected it."

Matthews says the management offered to partially index pensions by a fixed percentage. He would not discuss the exact amount however because, "we're not prepared to negotiate through the media."

The union called the strike after the Bell contract was voted down by 51.3 percent of the workers. The union has amassed an $11 million strike fund and is prepared to stay off the job until workers are offered what they judge to be a "fair contract."

Matthews says Bell management is capable of doing the strikers jobs.

"If it comes to it we'll hold up for as long as required," he says. "The union are the only people with an idea of how long it will take."

HHSS changes dep't heads

by JAY KERR-WILSON

There is going to be some changes in command at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School this September.

-Al Oakley's appointment as acting Head of Guidance was approved. Oakley is taking the place of Ken Rydman during his leave of absence.

-Mary Medley was approved to begin a three year term as Head of French.

-Marilyn Kuno's appointment as Head of Special Education was also approved. This is also a three year appointment.

-Wellesley Robertson was appointed to the position of Minor Head of Geography for a three year term and

-Paul Morissette was appointed to the position of Minor Head of History also for a three year term.

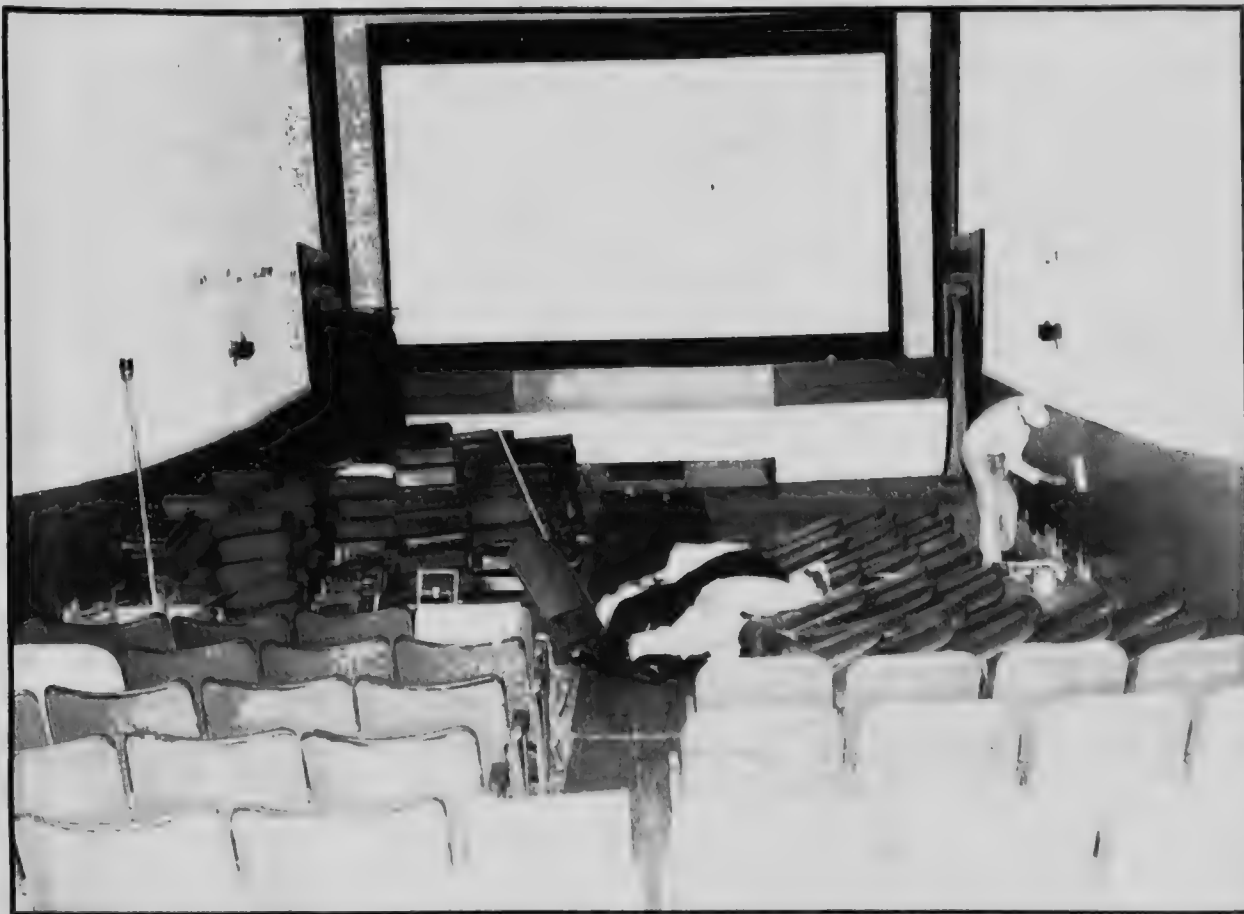

Jobs reviewed

The responsibilities that Dale Robinson will have to undertake as the new Superintendent of Education were presented to the board of education trustees for consideration last Tuesday.

Robinson assumes the position on August 1 when his current job as curriculum co-ordinator is phased out. The duties of superintendent will include organizing teacher reviews, curriculum and professional development days. Half of the time will be spent on curriculum, 30 percent on special education needs and 20 percent on staffing responsibilities.

Job descriptions for Director of Education, now held by Stuart Baker, and Business Administrator, now held by Jim Bradley, were also presented to the board for consideration. These descriptions will be reviewed at the August board meeting and if approved will become part of board policy.

The Molou Theatre got a face lift this week although you're more likely to feel the difference than see it. The old seats have been replaced by newer, more comfortable ones which offer four inches more leg room.

Man wanted for break and enters

by JAY KERR-WILSON
Staff reporter

A bench warrant was been issued for the arrest of a man charged with 10 counts of break and enter in connection to the rampage of break-ins in the Dorset area last August.

Kirk Charron was scheduled to appear in court last Wednesday but failed to appear. The crown spent $1,500 to bring the people whose cottages had been broken into back to Minden to act as witnesses. Some of the witnesses came from as far away as the United States.

Charron's co-defendant, Steve

Oliphant, of Mississauga Ont., pleaded guilty in Milton last Tuesday to his part in the break-ins, which took place on or about August 12 and involved 20 cottages, and was brought to Minden yesterday to testify. Court officials said that Charron is intending to represent himself.

HAVE thanks readers, recyling concern is shown

To the Editor:

On behalf of the H.A.V.E. Committee, I would like to express my thanks for the community's continued support with the 5th Annual Walk for Water. This has truly become a Haliburton County mission.

To date, 51 wells have been dug in India and six are underway in The Gambia (Africa). Imagine the villagers appreciation when they receive pure water for the first time; and all because of the success of the Walk.

Pledges should amount to close to $12,000 and with the government matching grant from CIDA of 3 to 1, we are looking at substantial monies for providing more bore wells.

A special thanks to the committee of hard workers I had the pleasure of working with and all those who donated supplies or food on the day of the Walk. And of course, to all of you who so generously support and encourage the Walk faithfully each year. May God bless you all—abundantly!

Sincerely,

Nada Vaughan,
Chairman WALK FOR WATER 1988.

Man's dominion

To the Editor:

The first chapter of Genesis describes the "creation" of the "heavens and the earth", in which "man" was given "dominion" over the creatures and things within this creation. Personally, I am not really concerned about the actual genesis of our planet but I am interested in noting that "in the beginning" it was seen as being "good", and that "man" was given the responsibility to care for it.

Recently, I travelled for two months around the world. On a number of occasions I stood in awe at the beauty of this earth, and the genuine friendliness and warmth of the people. Still there were times, especially in the cities of Bombay, Hong Kong, and Manila, when I trembled at the thought of what our earth will be like by the year 2000.

Concerns about pollution of all forms (in land, water and air) are being brought more and more to our attention. Certainly, any person who is concerned about his/her own health and survival, and especially that of his/her offspring, must be responsible stewards of our earthly environment; and insist on others to be likewise. Can one imagine any politician today, aspiring to any level of government, ignoring the polluting factors of our earth? Can one imagine an educator who fails to impress upon students the detrimental consequences of pollution within our world? Can one imagine a parent (as well as other adults) who does not show by example their children the meaning of being environmentally responsible? None of us can be excused any longer. Knowingly and unintentionally, we have been all contributing unnecessarily to the destruction of the one and only earthly environment that sustains us. However, let's not lament about our past; we can still salvage our future.

As I return to certain countries, and go into new ones, I am amazed to find a rapid increase of big (and I mean "big") industrial plants in the so-called Third World countries. On the surface, this may appear good, in that many, otherwise unemployed people, are now getting work (even though it may be akin to slave labour in some situations). However, what is scary about this apparent "progress" is that now we are seeing too many huge corporations establishing their presence in areas of the world where pollution controls are often not demanding, and consequently massive pollutants are being spewed into our earth's atmosphere, unto its land surface, and into its waters. As a result of this rapid world-wide industrial spread, our natural environment is obviously moving even faster to a pollution-saturation point, where, I suspect, none of us will escape from its effects, no matter where we live. (Pollution of any form knows no boundaries.)

In my travels, too, I am finding the same assortment of consumer garbage, such as plastic, paper, glass and metal, throughout the urban and rural settings of Developing Countries as one finds, say, in Toronto and Haliburton County. One should expect this to be the case since the producers of such items are now being established — due primarily to political and economic reasons — in those other countries. For instance, it is not uncommon to see numerous throw-away juice or cheap drink containers being thrown from passing vehicles to the roadsides of rural India or the Philippines' highlands as are such cartons being dropped by tourists beside the Great Wall of China.

We humans can be very careless when it comes to garbage, no matter where we reside or visit. Because of the greater number of consumers, garbage accumulation could fast become an even greater problem in Third World countries than what we are experiencing in the more affluent nations. Currently, in their battle to survive, innumerable families in the poorer countries must be daily involved with the re-using and recycling of garbage, and thus helping to hold in check, somewhat, our pollution crisis. In fact, we ourselves could learn much from the "rag pickers" (unfortunate as they are) of our world.

Thanks to Eric Lilius, Gordon Smith, Beth Zwecher and other concerned residents and cottagers of this area, the County of Haliburton Association for a Good Natural Environment (C.H.A.N.G.E.) has now come into existence. The intention of this new association is not simply to make us aware that pollution is destroying our beautiful environment but it will also enable us (by providing the opportunities) to "change". Hopefully we shall quickly and effectively make use of these opportunities.

As we change for the better our local environment, we are in turn contributing (small as it may be) to the overall improvement of our good planet, earth. Since "man" has been given dominion over our planet, we must choose either to continue destroying it or to begin saving it. Whatever our choice, we must surely realize that we are presently fast running out of time.

Gerry Feltham, Ingoldsby.

St. Anthony's celebrates 50th anniversary

A need for worship, spirit of dedication are what makes Catholic Church thrive

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff reporter

TAKE AWAY ST. ANTHONY'S Roman Catholic Church, and you cut into the soul of many of its parishioners. Take away this place of worship, and the worshippers will feel cast into a sea of forlornness and uncertainty. But have no doubt that even with the church gone, you would be left with the faith of the people who have made it their spiritual home in the Highlands. St. Anthony's would rise again, just as faith made it rise from a small parcel of land half a century ago.

On Saturday, July 16, hundreds of local and out-of-town Roman Catholics will be joining Bishop Joseph Windle and Father Raphael Glofcheski in celebration of the Haliburton church's 50th anniversary. Following a mass at 4:30, some of the pews will make way for tables of food as people join together for a feast of today's pride and yesterday's commitment.

Built by a few

Back in 1938, the mood would have been quite different. A couple of weeks before the 16th of July, only a handful of people were gathered at the property on Victoria Street to build themselves a church, a place where they could give roots to their faith. While they would not be secretive about their work, they would know the eyes of the community were upon them.

"What are you doing," one passerby called to the man who was sweating under the June sun as he carted a wheelbarrow full of cement bags towards the men working on the foundation of the wooden church. A few Sundays later, his work stained clothes would be replaced by a flowing black cassock as he took his place at the head of this latest addition to Haliburton's worshipping community. But today, it is not his spiritual guidance he is offering to the men around him; it is his guidance as a builder and a man who gets things done.

"We're building a church," he paused long enough to say with his pronounced Irish accent.

"Aren't you afraid someone is going to burn it down?"

In his way with words, clear and to the point, Father Lesley Kennedy replied, "If they do they're going to hell."

This was the time when the highlight in many villages and towns throughout the province was the July 12th parade, when "King Billy" on his white horse would lead his fellow Orangemen in a march of unity and celebration.

In 1690, a volunteer army fortified the troops of William of Orange as he prepared to do battle with the ousted King James II. The latter was a Catholic ruler whose power was taken away by the Protestant William. Forty miles north of Dublin, the two kings met and on July 12th, William guaranteed the succession of Protestant kings to the English throne when he won the Battle of the Boyne.

The Protestants were jubilant and formed a fraternal society in 1795 to commemorate the victory and keep it strong in the minds of their fellow Irishmen. But they did more than parade through the streets. During the Irish insurrection of 1798, the volunteer army became the strongest link between the government in England and the Protestants in Ireland. Their foothold secure in the civil service and militia because of this involvement, the Orangemen later became a powerful force in Ireland.

However, following the Catholic Emancipation Act of 1829, the Orangemen's power was diminished but in Canada, the memory of the Battle of the Boyne was kept alive by Ogle Gowan, who founded the Grand Lodge of British North America in January, 1830 in Brockville. An Orangeman, it should be noted that his politics took precedence over his religion and he rallied Orangemen and Catholics together in his bid for a Conservative seat in Parliament. Later Sir John A. MacDonald would join the Orange Lodge as a ploy to get more support.

The names of the men who helped Father Lesley Kennedy sound like a list from an Italian telephone book: Biagi, Formica, Tiberi, Tonnello, Salvatori, Ricci, Cerchie, Cesaroni and Dollo. The only standout was Father Kennedy's fellow Irishman, Gordon Tobin

The Orange Lodge grew in popularity through the decades and reached its peak at the end of the 19th Century, although in small communities like Haliburton, lodges were still having parades until the 1940's and '50s. Every young boy wanted to be an Orangeman like his father, and the biggest honour would be to carry the banner behind some man dressed up as King Billy and riding the whitest horse in the area. Today, Lodge 975 is still active yet in a much more social and benevolent way. When St. Anthony's was raising funds for its new church in 1982, the fraternity proved that animosity was a thing of the past

St. Anthony's will be a place of joy on Saturday, July 16 when it made a substantial donation to the building fund.

The comforts of faith

But in 1938, Orange fever was still strong and perhaps there was cause for concern that someone may want to destroy this new symbol of Catholic faith in the community. Time however would see the church as an accepted and valued part of the community.

Just imagine how important this church was to it was. "When you have a faith, it's important." It was even more important now that the Salvatoris were contemplating a family of their own.

The desire for a church

The Salvatoris were not the only ones who believed there should be a church in Haliburton. Mike Biagi was only a young boy when he moved to Haliburton and he was not that much older when he went into the lumber camps with his Uncle Ned Biagi, a man who would become like a father to him and his sister Vittoria (Formica.)

"It's unbelievable how the wicked can remember," he says as he begins his story of the history of St. Anthony's. His memory goes back further than that however, to the days in Italy when he learned that church was a place you respected, that you approached with all the seriousness not easy in youth.

Ned Biagi was the adopted leader of the Italian community and he would make arrangements for the priest from Bancroft or Kinmount to visit the camps on a specific day. The priest would also visit the homes, but it was in the camps that a quiet corner was set aside for confession. A bedroom perhaps, made more holy with the addition of some white linen.

Bancroft was a long way away from Haliburton and today it doesn't make sense that the Haliburton parish should become part of the Pembroke Diocese. However, as a booklet written for the dedication of the new church says, "In the 19th Century, when much of Ontario was a wilderness, Frontier Church Diocesan Lines were at best vague and undefined. Such was the case with the Diocese of Pembroke which was organized as a Vicariate Apostolic on July 11, 1882 and as a Diocese on May 4, 1898.

"The question arose as to which diocese should have the pastoral responsibility for communities such as Haliburton. Because most transportation into the undeveloped areas was by river, the decision was made to allocate pastoral responsibility in view of conforming with established waterway routes. Because Haliburton was linked to the Madawaska chain of rivers which flow into the Ottawa River, Haliburton was placed in the Pembroke Diocese."

Thus it was that Father Kennedy made his way over hill and dale to get to the men in the camps. To men like Mike Biagi, confession was at the heart of his faith because of the individual attention it affords its members. The priest uses his knowledge of the laws of God to lead the men along the right path, with a few gentle reminders along the way should temptations arise.

"It's done because you believe in it; you believe the priest is God's servant and he'll guide you straight," he says. "You can't break away from it because it's great guidance."

He was nine when he first remembers either Father Kennedy or Father Kaye from Kinmount coming to the camps, and the feeling was already present that this was no solution to Haliburton's Catholic needs. A church was needed in the community, the question was how to get the funds to build it.

Finally, when Mr. Biagi was in his late teens, the means were added to the faith and a church could be built on Victoria Street. It would be simple, not at all like the one Mrs. Salvatori could remember from her youth in Italy, but it was a church nonetheless, and a great source of pride. In the booklet written in 1982, Mrs. Salvatori remembers the stories her husband Frank told her:

'When I think back, I wonder how I didn't go crazy,' says Gina Salvatori of those first lonely years in Haliburton. She was in a strange country, far away from everything which was familiar to her—especially the magnificent Italian churches. Her loneliness was made more acute by the absence of a place of worship and comfort. 'When you have a faith, it's important' the young Gina Salvatori. Here she was, thousands of miles away from her family, her country and her magnificent church, with its rich art work, choirs and bells peeling the songs of worship to one and all. One's heart belonged to your family; one's soul belonged to your faith; one's faith belonged to your church. The three were inseparable.

It wasn't that Haliburton seemed a God-forsaken place, it's just that God's handiwork was so different from the way it was at home. Everything was so foreign, and to make it all worse, there was no pillar of faith to lean on for strength. The nearest Roman Catholic church was in Kinmount, and that was a long way away from the Salvatori's home near Haliburton Lake.

The only thing which bound Mrs. Salvatori to this wilderness was her husband of a few months, Frank. He had left troubled Italy a few years later and when the woods of Haliburton offered him a livelihood and a sense of solitude, he convinced his bride that this is where they should make their home—for a few years at least.

So in 1937, Mrs. Salvatori left behind everything that was precious to her and set up house on a quiet stretch of County Road 14. Unlike the Italians who would move to the same areas in the city, the Haliburton Italians fanned out throughout the countryside, keeping the spirit of Italy in their homes but becoming one and the same with the people of the community. Their isolation forced them to learn English and the customs of this strange land, something which Mrs. Salvatori is glad to note today.

"When I think back, I wonder how I didn't go crazy," she says, alone now in her white house alongside the Oblong River. There was no electricity, no running water, this strange woodstove to cook on and only coil oil lamps to provide her with enough light with which to see her knitting and embroidery.

"Sometimes I used to get so lonesome I wished I could be a bird" and fly over to Italy to see her family. She yearned for the familiar in this land which was so strange—"even a porcupine would scare me to death."

But as she made up her mind to be happy in Haliburton, what she missed the most was her church. She had her Bible, her pictures, her crucifixes and her prayers, but there was no priest to lead her through the rites of faith.

"We should have a church," everyone believed. These people had grown up with the words of the Ten Commandments imprinted on their minds. And one of the commandments said Sunday was a day for God, a day when everyone should express their faith in church. Not to go to Mass was like committing a sin, unwilling though

"Father Kennedy hired a carpenter from Bancroft and Father asked that all of the very limited number of Catholic men to provide the additional manpower in order to construct the Church as economically as possible. Father Kennedy provided the leadership by working very hard mentally as well as physically. He was helping to carry bags of cement out of the garage with a wheelbarrow and then mixing the cement by hand. One of the other helpers showed how strong he was by loading and pushing five large bags of cement on his wheelbarrow. Father Kennedy, who would not be outdone, put six bags on his wheelbarrow and called out to Augusto, 'Look, I have six on mine.'

"There were a number of men who assisted in a major or minor sense with the construction of the Church. Among the helpers from the Haliburton area were: Ned Biagi, who was referred to as 'the Boss' by the others; Frank Biagi, who built the altar and altar railing; Mike Biagi; Eugene Formica; Bruno Tiberi; Augusto Tonnelotto; Frank Salvatori; Armando Salvatori; Julio Ricci; Ulisse Cerchie; Angelo Cesaroni; Peter Dollo, the youngest adult worker; and Gordon Tobin, the only non-Mediterranean Irish man in the group.

"The first day that construction began, discussion took place among the workers about what name to give their Church. Father Kennedy said, 'Let's look at the calendar and see what saint's day it falls on.' Since it was the feast of St. Anthony on that day of June 13th, the men unanimously agreed that they should name their Church, St. Anthony's.

"The first Mass was celebrated on July 16th, 1938, before the building was completed. The approximate price of the building was $750."

(To commemorate the Italians instrumental driving force behind the creation of St. Anthony's, Leo Dobrzensky has written a booklet entitled They Worked and Prayed Together: The Italians in Haliburton County. It will be available at the special anniversary service on July 16.)

The first mass

Mrs. Salvatori remembers that first Mass well. Father Kennedy brought a small organ with him from Bancroft, as well as a young boy named Jerry who sang the beautiful hymns she could remember filling the awesome stone churches back home. It is interesting to note that while Father Kennedy was Irish and most of his parishioners were Italian, language was no problem because the service was still in Latin.

"We were so proud of that little church. It was so small, but still..." Mrs. Salvatori says. The people hadn't been able to give much to their church by way of money, but they had worked long and hard with all the resources at their fingertips to make it come into being. Of course, to other young mothers the next hope was to have a Catholic School, but in this, their hopes were not to be realized. "It doesn't bother me any more," she adds, filled with pride as she thinks of her children who grew up to "good respectable" adults even without the extra teaching.

Father Kennedy would have agreed with her, for he believed "a home is the main place to teach children." His preaching was fine and good, but one day a church each week does not a good Catholic make.

Given his nature, Father Kennedy had the strength of character to make his presence felt even when he wasn't there. He was a very strict Catholic and spoke in such strong—and loud—terms, the parishioners were afraid passersby would be able to hear his words as they walked by.

"He talked fire and brimstone," remembers Mr. Biagi. Catholic dogma was to be followed to a "T" and there was no room for errant Catholics in his church. Mr. Biagi's wife, Connie, remembers the day Father Kennedy stormed over to her house, demanding to know why she hadn't attended the special service. It was in the middle of the week and not all of the men could take the time out to attend, but her, she had no excuse to miss the Mass. It didn't really matter that she was all alone at home with a young baby and no transportation.

Mrs. Biagi also can remember those 12th of July parades through the streets. "I wouldn't want to be around," she says. "I always felt the Orangemen were putting us down."

But she also knows that prejudice can be just as strong on the Catholic side. One night she and a girlfriend went dancing at the Golden Slipper. When the friend sat down after a dance, Mrs. Biagi commented that her partner would be a nice prospect for the future. But the girlfriend would have nothing to do with him anymore. "He told me he was an Orangeman."

"In my time, there wasn't much said about the fact I was a Catholic," Mr. Biagi adds to the conversation, but everyone knew his religion and whenever any story was told about Catholicism, all eyes would turn his way. Should the looks become words of ignorance, the teacher would

'He talked and fire and brimstone,' Mike and Connie Biagi remember of Father Kennedy. If he had been here when the parish was without a church in 1982, 'he'd have died if he had known we enjoyed going to the Anglican church. It was the nicest feeling there ever was.'

quickly put things straight, he remembers.

Mrs. Salvatori tries not to concentrate on the former bad feelings between denominations. She even would watch the Orange parades, although always keeping discretely on the sidelines. These sort of things shouldn't have a part in today's faith, she believes. "This was years ago and why should we be responsible" for the prejudice of yesterday? Many of her friends aren't Catholics; "They keep their religion and I keep mine."

"True Christianity is loving," Mrs. Biagi believes, and that loving includes people of all faiths. Pope John the 23rd had reinforced this belief when he established the Ecumenical Council, but the local Catholics learned the true spirit of co-operation when it came time to build their new church.

The lovely little white church was simply bursting at its seams in the summer months, when visiting cottagers made St. Anthony's their summer place of worship. The Italians were still a viable force at the church, but now people of all nationalities were finding peace at the church.

Poor Father Kennedy had to spend his resting hours in a little cubby hole in the attic. It was so hot and so small, he used to tell everyone "You have to go outside to change your mind." He had built on an addition to the church with the help of Vic Gauthier in the mid-1950's, but now a few touch ups would not solve the problems.

"Something had to be done and yet you didn't want to see it torn down," says Mrs. Salvatori, the vision of the pain in her husband's eyes still vivid in her memory. "It gave you a bad feeling."

In a way it was a very good thing that by the time the parish was forced to tear down the old church, Father Kennedy, the man who had devoted his own sweat and tears to its foundations, wasn't around to see the day—for more reasons than one.

It was Father Henry J. Maloney who replaced Father Kennedy in the fall of 1957. Here was a priest whose faith was just as strong but whose style was vastly different. He was Catholic to the core and yet like Pope John, believed now was the time for all faiths to forget past recriminations and develop a fellowship of harmony. How one worshipped was not the main thing; it was that one worshipped at all which gained ascendancy.

Tearing down the little white church a tough decision

This doesn't mean that one should stop being a good Catholic, he was just more diplomatic in explaining what a good Catholic should be. "When Father Maloney would preach, he was so firm, his voice was like velvet," the Biagis say.

A new church is built

Father Maloney had to oversee the building of a new church, school and convent in the "Mother Parish" of Bancroft before attention could be turned to the building needs of Haliburton. In the meantime, the parishioners held various fundraising events and greatly appreciated the help of the rest of the community in their quest to raise $70,000. The donation from the Orange Lodge was particularly well received because it meant so much to those who could remember the parades through town and the discriminatory hyperbole which followed.

But where to worship while the new church was being built? It was Haliburton musician Bill Glendon who suggested the solution. He would occasionally play the organ at St. Anthony's but he was more well known at St. George's Anglican Church as its organist and choir director. Now, seeing that the Catholics were in need of a different kind, he asked them to consider holding their services at the Anglican Church.

It was an enlightening experience. Mrs. Salvatori had been to an Anglican church service before and was amazed at how similar many of the words were. When she learned they would be worshipping in a church of another denomination, it didn't bother her at all. "We were very glad and I felt very good."

The Biagis can remember the Sunday when the Catholics were leaving the church at the same time the Anglicans were arriving, and everyone paused to shake hands.

"They made us more broadminded," says Mrs. Biagi, who until that time had held the Catholic Church apart from others. "It was the nicest feeling there ever was among Catholics in another church."

It was a good thing Father Kennedy was not around to see it. This was the man who fostered the belief that Catholicism was superior to other faiths and "he would have died if he had known we enjoyed going to the Anglican Church."

But on May 16th, 1982, there was no denying that the Catholics were overjoyed to be hearing Mass for the first time in their new church. Here the booklet explains the transition from old church to new:

"In the fall of 1981, the Diocesan Building Committee gave their approval to being the construction of the new church. Using the general architectural design of the church in Waltham, Quebec, which allowed for the seasonal overflow of people, a church design was completed.

"Accordingly, the final service was held in the original building on November 1st, 1981. It goes without saying that tears were shed by many as they realized that the church in which baptisms, weddings, funerals and weekly liturgical celebrations which had been an integral part of their lives would be torn down.

"On May 16, the first mass was celebrated in the new church and a sense of deserved satisfaction was in the air as the parishioners appreciated the fruits of their labour.

"Today, July 18, 1982, marks the culminating stop in the long procedure to erect a new building to the glory of God. Finishing touches have been added and the building is complete. His Excellency Most Reverend Joseph R. Windle's blessing of the new church marks its official opening. This is indeed a memorable event in the history St. Anthony's. We remain grateful to the people who made this possible and thank above all God through whom all things are made."

Bishop Windle and his assistant, Monseigneur Robert Borne will be at next Saturday's service but shortly after Father Maloney retired in 1986, the priest with the velvety voice passed away. Father Archie Afelskie was here for the next year and a half but when an opening came up in his old hometown, he left the area. The Diocese called into service Father Raphael (Ray) Gloscheski who had just retired from the armed forces but he is just with the church on a temporary basis.

A priests of their own?

For many years, the Bancroft church has supported the aspirations of the local parishioners who want to have their own parish priest. The road from Bancroft has greatly improved over the years, but it is still very inconvenient to have the priest so far away.

Besides that, people like Mike Biagi want to see a return to the personal attention he remembers from back in the days of the lumber camp. That one-to-one relationship can best be fostered if the priest is living in the community, visiting them in times of joy, sadness and spiritual need.

The main stumbling block is a shortage of priests. Fewer men are joining the seminary and even fewer are finding the lifestyle of a priest compatible to their own nature. It is a big problem for the church in general and it may make the people of St. Anthony's wait a little longer.

But until that time comes there's always the church to bind them together.

...It's been 51 years since Gina Salvatori felt spiritually adrift without a church to anchor her to her faith. She no longer cries when she thinks of living in this strange land; now she would cry if she had to leave it. There would be more hard times in her life, but of a different nature—sickness, death and loss. Yet after the first year when her heart was troubled and there was no place to turn to close to home, she has had St. Anthony's to guide her through the sadness, and the joys.

This woman of a simple faith which runs deep speaks for many when she says, "the church is somehow a big help. If I didn't have the faith, I don't think I could have carried on. It's a part of me."

And what if someone was to take away her church? "That would upset me all right. It would be a big disaster. I hope I don't have to live through it."

Hello again everyone, I am back again filling in for Winnie for the summer. Happy New Summer! We did have a fairly restful winter as we closed our cottages from January to May and so were able to get in a little time to ourselves. Jim and Mary joined Mike Collins team for curling and talk about beginners luck. They claimed the winners trophy for the Monday night mixed league. Monmouth Curling Club will welcome all new curlers who wish to join. We have a lot of fun with mixed or ladies and mens leagues at very little cost. For information call Bill Smith at 448-2861. I also curled with the ladies, bowled with our Wilberforce/Harcourt team and enjoyed many relaxing hours at the Harcourt Community Centre with Clair Loft's Art Classes.

Both Winnie and I have tried several times to draw some attention to the terrible condition of Highway 648 between Wilberforce and Highland Grove. This is a main route for both visitors and residents to reach Bancroft or Haliburton and points South. The condition of the road with hairpin curves and bumps, not to mention potholes in

This was brought too close to home for me when my daughter Mary and her friend were by some miracle able to escape injury after turning the car over in a rain squall.

However, regardless of my person involvement, nearly a car a week ends up in near tragedy on this highway.

This from Sylvia Chameron of the United Church ladies: There will be a Rummage Sale at St. Margaret's Church, Wilberforce, on Saturday July 9, from 10:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. This will be in the basement of the church.

There will also be a Bake and Yard Sale at the Branch 624 Legion, Wilberforce on July 9. I believe this runs until 4:00 p.m.

The following item was submitted by Flo Elliott:

A twenty-fifth ordination anniversary celebration was held for Father Tadues Porzuczek on June 26, at St. John Vianney Church in Highland Grove. The church had been beautifully decorated for the happy occasion. Following the 12 o'clock Mass, the congregation gathered at the recreation centre for a delicious and bountiful pot luck lunch.

The hall, lovely with flowers and decorations, was crowded with well wishers, including guests at the head table—Mr. and Mrs. Al Yanch of Oshawa, Father Tad's brother and sister-in-law from Montreal, Father Felix, parish priest from Kinmount and Mr. and Mrs. George Cull, long time friends of Father's from Omamee, who had been invited as a special surprise.

After lunch Father opened his gifts, which had been presented by the children during the Offertory of the Mass. The gifts, purchased with money donated by the congregation, included a beautiful Alb, a golden Crucifix, candle lighter and extinguisher, was lighting tapers, and brass candle followers. After many thanks by Father, it was time for him to have his picture taken with his favourite people, the children. They all gathered around him, and baby Mary Bowen, the newest member of our parish, was not left out. She sat quite contented on Father's knee and drank her bottle, while many pictures were taken.

A special thank you to music makers, Robert Madill, his son Faron, Gary Burroughs and Father Felix. Their singing and playing was the perfect finish to our happy afternoon.

Thank you also to all who contributed and attended to make this a memorable occasion.

Grades 5 and 6 students enjoyed a bus trip to the Science Centre and Black Creek Pioneer Village on June 10. On June 20 the Grade 3 and 4 students enjoyed a bus trip to Cullen Gardens and Black Creek Pioneer Village. The Coboconk principal Mr. McCaughen leaves Coby to go to Bobcaygeon when fall term begins. Ms. Nardangeli, the Grade 7 and 8 teacher goes to Alexander Public School this fall. The rest of the teachers stay on so students will have most of the teachers they know.

Mrs. Lena Hughes and grand-daughters and her sister Florence Stone of Lindsay, left by train for British Columbia last week. They will meet their sister, Joan Godwin there and all will go on to Alaska for a holiday.

Last week, Clayton Cameron and friend Allan, of Minden, Doug Burney of Beaverton and Grant Lake, motored to Wooster, Ohio to attend a horse sale. Isobel and Ingram Wessell of Norland also attended the sale. The horse fans left early Thursday morning and returned home in the early hours of Sunday morning.

On Wednesday morning, Joan Cooper of West Guilford, Lola Sims of Haliburton, Olive Meepers and I journeyed to Port Hope where we boarded a bus with other Avon ladies and went to the big Avon plant at Pointe Claire, Montreal. The company gave us lunch there, then we toured the plant to see the creations of deodorants, colognes, lipsticks, creams, etc. from start to finish. All ingredients are tested in the lab there and put together under the most antiseptic conditions. We saw how the finished products are packed and sent out to reps across Canada.

Then it was over to our hotel to rest before going out to supper. We went to an authentic Japanese restaurant where our meal was cooked at our table. We visited Beni Hava's restaurant, had a super meal and a chef who was a real comedian, he was funnier than the TV Chinese cook! We enjoyed shopping at the Fairview (Pointe Claire) Mall and had dinner there. We got home Thursday night tired, but happy with the memories of a fun trip.

The Norland area Seniors had nine tables of euchre last week, with Adrian Lee high of 62 and five lone hands. Ralph Purvis had low score with 37. Ladies high score was Ivy Boyce with 59, Gene Crisp had two lone hands and Barb Purvis had low of 32. Lucky draw winners were Bill Barkwell, Helen Barkwell, John Button, Dorothy Adams and Ivy boyce.

Sunday June 26 saw a packed house in the Norland United Church when five United Churches of the area gathered to say goodbye to a good friend and Pastor, Rev. Jack Morrison, who will be leaving the end of June for the backwoods area of Bancroft. Jack has been a friend to a lot of people in the area and certainly will be missed. All the best wishes of his many friends go with him, plus a token of love in the form of a beautiful log cabin quilt, made by the Coboconk and Baddow ladies and envelopes to help furnish his new home from Norland, Kinmount and Burnt River friends.

On Monday June 26 the Norland Women's Institute provided a beautiful buffet lunch for the Grade 8 Graduates of Norland Public School, as well as Mr. Ken Thurston and staff. Best wishes to all the students and a happy and safe summer to you all.

Many talents displayed at sale

GUILD NOTES

by Shirley Hodgson

WELCOME BACK to the many regular summer visitors and a special welcome to all the new arrivals. Very few settings are as beautiful or more relaxing than the County of Haliburton—with its tranquility, fresh air and beautiful surroundings. Of course, this is not so if you happen to be employed in any of the numerous jobs in the County or if you are a student at the School of Fine Arts—because then you are almost too busy or much too involved to enjoy the scenery.

Yes, the Haliburton Summer School of Fine Arts has opened its doors on another busy season. This is the 21st year for the school, which continues to expand its programmes. The classes are designed for both beginners and advanced students. Be sure to check with the School—just in case there is a vacancy in a class which you might be interested in.

The Haliburton Guild of Fine Arts—Summer Exhibition and Sale—becomes a reality again this summer. This is the 23rd year for the Sale. There will be artists of many varied talents represented, such as painters, jewellers, metal workers, knitters, potters, quilters, sculptors, weavers, woodworkers, etc. Where is this show? At the J. D. Hodgson Elementary School, Haliburton, Ontario. The school is on County Road 1 just off Highway 121. When? From July 8th until July 23rd. Time? Monday to Saturday from 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. For further information call 457-2330. The Guild Show official opening and awards night will be on Friday July 8 at 7:30 p.m. If anyone is interested in helping in any way please phone 457-2330. There is a special need for help on Saturday July 9.

There will be a Quilt set up at the Sale, donated by Mrs. Shirley Cummings of the "Bush Boutique" at Haliburton Lake. If anyone knows the hours of work that goes into the marking of the pattern on this quilt—one would realize just what a wonderful gift this is! Quilters will be needed to assist with this quilt at the school on July 16 until July 23. If interested contact Marie Wallace at 754-2648. Remember to purchase tickets for this year's quilt, also there is a raffle on a beautiful canoe.

Spending the weekend with the Alex Stephenson's were their daughter and grand-daughter.

Spending a day or two with the Stan Archers before going on to her cottage on Beech Lake was Mrs. Maisie Davies, also at the cottage were daughter Debbie and children and son Marty, and son Gary of Regina and his children.

Mark this date on your calendar: July 16 when Carnarvon's U.C.W. hold their annual Lawn and Bake Sale from 10:00 a.m. to 12 noon.

To those summer friends who are just returning the Sunday Worship Service now begins at 9:00 a.m. instead of the former 9:30 a.m.

We understand that Ken Rowden is still in a critical but stable condition and remains in a coma.

What a great improvement at Jug City now the yard and driveway are paved especially in this dry season. Also in the village we have a driving range and miniature golf adjacent to Jug City on Highway 35.

Mr. and Mrs. Garth Windsor went up to Thunder Bay by motor home, spending some time there before calling on their daughter and family in Haileybury. Coming back with them to spend some time were grand-daughters Kelly and Jocelyn Johnston. Also spending the holiday weekend were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Windsor of Bradford.

It seems to me there is something very wrong with the system that allows a beach that has been public for over 60 years to be fenced and declared private, leaving the children of this area no place to swim, no beach to play on and nothing provided to take its place. My children learned to swim there, my grandchildren cannot paddle around in it.

"For to me, to live is Christ and to die is gain." Philippians 1:21

Raspberry pies—one of the doctors' favourites! Raspberries are my absolute favourite berry and if I could "overdose" I would! Try these recipes on the man in your life.

RASPBERRY ANGEL PIE

Meringue shell (recipe follows)
3 oz. pkg. raspberry jello
1-1/4 cups boiling water
2 cups fresh raspberries (or less)
1 cup whipping cream

Add boiling water to the jello powder and stir until the powder is dissolved. Chill until the mixture is the consistency of egg whites. Mash the fresh raspberries slightly, whip the cream until stiff and fold both into the jello. Chill until the mixture holds its shape when dropped from a spoon. Pile into the prepared meringue shell, chill several hours. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream and whole raspberries at serving time. *This could be just as angelic if you made it with strawberries.

MERINGUE PIE SHELL

2/3 cup egg whites (about 4 large) at room temperature
1/8 tsp. salt
1-1/3 tsp. vinegar
1-1/3 tsp. water
1 cup white sugar
1/2 tsp. almond flavouring

Beat all ingredients together until very stiff and glossy. Spread evenly in a well-buttered large pie plate, raising the meringue around the sides of the pan. Preheat oven to 400 degrees and turn it off. Put the pie into the oven and forget about it until the oven is cold—overnight is a good time. The shell will be pale beige and will keep for days in a dry storage place.

RASPBERRY LATTICE PIE

Pastry for 2 crust pie
4 cups fresh raspberries
1 cup sugar
1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 tsp. grated lemon rind
1-1/2 tbs. butter
Light cream
Sugar

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Line a pie pan with half the pastry, leaving 1 inch of pastry hanging over the edge. Combine 1 cup sugar, flour and lemon rind and mix through berries lightly. Pour fruit and sugar mixture into pastry-lined pan. Dot with butter. Roll out remaining pastry and cut into 1/2 inch strips. Use these strips to make a lattice top on pie. Moisten end of strips and press down slightly so they stick to undercrust. Roll edge of undercrust and ends of strips together tightly to make a high edge. Flute edge. Brush lattice with cream and sprinkle with sugar. cover edge with foil. Bake about 35 minutes or until juice is bubbling well and pastry is browned.

RASPBERRY CUSTARD PIE

1/2 cup sugar
1 tsp. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
3 eggs, beaten
2-1/2 cups milk
1 cup fresh raspberries

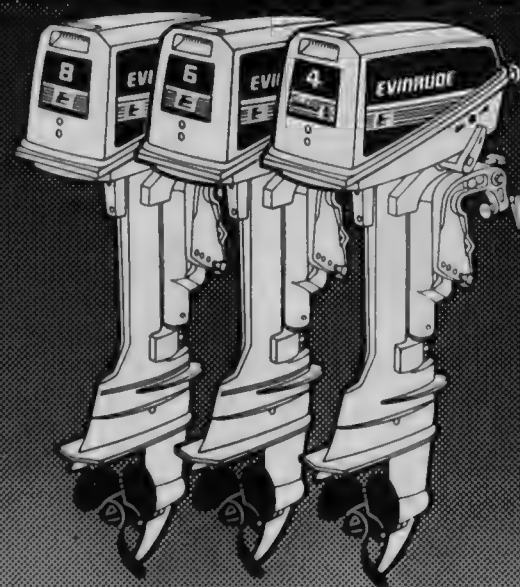

Combine the sugar, flour, salt and beaten eggs. Scald the milk and add it gradually. Pour into the pie shell, dot the berries over the custard. Bake at 350 degrees for about 45 minutes, or until a silver knife stuck into the middle comes out clean.

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Results of the Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station Drop-In Centre euchre games Thursday June 23 are: ladies high, Vi Cooke, ladies low, Ann Rivers, mens high, Gordon Taylor, mens low, Charlie Henderson, lone hands, Lil Platt, there were four tables.

Kinmount Legion Branch 441 and Minden Legion Branch 626 will be in attendance at the Annual Memorial Service which will be held at the Kinmount Cemetery on Sunday July 10 at 2:00 p.m. The Reverend Dawn Gilbey of St. James Anglican along with the new Roman Catholic Priest, Father Felix Magellan of St. Patrick's in Kinmount, will be the officiating Clergy. Father Magellan will present a guitar solo and song and hopes to meet many of the people. Brenda Simmonds will be there with her guitar and song and Ursula Nietsch will also provide lovely music with her accordion. Bring a lawn chair, enjoy a beautiful service along with the entertainment and quietly remember our departed loved ones. Following the service there will be a light reception at the Kinmount Legion Hall. Everyone cordially invited to attend.

Did you know that the Kinmount Library now has 1000 books more in stock which you are invited to read and enjoy through the summer? The hours at the Library for those of you who have been asking: each Tuesday 10:00 a.m. to 12 noon and 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Then, each Friday from 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. for the summer months only. Also during the summer, every Tuesday morning at 10:30 a.m.

there will be a story time for the kids.

Kawartha Summer Theatre Youth Tour will be presenting "The Frog Prince" on July 8 at 10:30 a.m. in the Kinmount Community Hall, hosted by the County Library.

Robin Hall is getting around with the aid of a walker these days because of a broken ankle. I hope all is well soon Robin!

It's nice to hear Charlie Molyneux is out and around again following his recent hospital stay.

Welcome home to Glenda and Clarke Simpson.

Happy anniversary to Joe and Lila Shaw Thursday June 23.

Jesse Buxcey, Irene Bartley, Helen Graham, Jason Moss and I enjoyed a few hours of strawberry picking on Friday June 24.

Bill Smith of Mississauga was the lucky winner of $153 in the 50/50 draw held at the Kinmount Legion Saturday June 25.

June 18, the annual Clarence Bacon Memorial Tournament took place and the winners were Cindy and Rick Watson, Flo and Al Jopling, all of Kinmount. The doubles was won by the Kinmount team of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart. Singles winners were: ladies, Betty Stuart of Cannington and for the men 'Jerry' from Beaver-ton. There was a good turnout of eighteen teams and everyone had a good time and enjoyed the lunch which was served by the Kinmount Legion Ladies' Auxiliary.

Happy birthday to Charlie Henderson on Tuesday June 28. Charlie is now a chipper seventy-five and wishes to thank all his family, friends and neighbours for the lovely surprise party held for him at Kinvale Restaurant and for all the cards and gifts. There were some thirty-nine or so present to enjoy a roast beef dinner in the evening of Charlie's big day.

The $300 jackpot was won by a Norland lady at the Coboconk Legion on Thursday June 23 and it was won on the 59th number.

Don't forget July 7 when the Victoria County Seniors Picnic takes place at Memorial Park in Lindsay. Bring a lawn chair and a bag lunch and join in a fun day. Cold drinks and coffee will be provided. Tickets are available from Lloyd Brown 454-1509, Norland; Ivan Dewell 883-2965, Seabright; Elizabeth Lambert in Lindsay or check with any of the Seniors Clubs.

Victoria County Senior Citizens are invited to attend a buffet lunch on July 16 at 12:30 p.m. with entertainment by Hastings Family of Oro. Be at the Norland Recreation Centre in Ward Park, North Norland for this fun time.

The Fenelon Falls Public School celebrated their graduation of future high school students on Tuesday June 28 at the Fenelon Falls Legion Hall. A roast beef/turkey dinner was served by Grade VII students and the tables were nicely decorated with vases of flowers with the 1988 graduating students photograph along with a program and nicely done place cards. There were some very good speeches from teachers and reps. from Victoria County Board of Education and Village of Fenelon Falls. Special guest was D.L. Papke, past principal. The students were at their best, looking very chic in their best clothes. It was a very enjoyable evening and best wishes to all staff and students in the coming years.

For those of you who like to play cards, St. James Hall, in Kinmount will be holding their euchre games every Tuesday evening during the summer and the Seniors have their euchre games every Thursday evening at Kinmount Railroad Drop-In Centre, the, for the bingo players: Tuesday evenings—Kirkfield Lions Hall on Highway 48 in Kirkfield;

Wednesday evening, Coboconk Lions, Thursday, Coboconk Legion. All these bingos are now dabble bingo and Friday evening Kinmount Legion holds their bingo played with chips. there are always yard sales, auctions, strawberry suppers, concerts, tours, etc. Too numerous to mention here! Who says there's nothing to do up our way?

The Norland Horticulture Society held their annual meeting, show and tea on Tuesday afternoon, June 28. Though attendance wasn't as good as was hoped for, a great time was had by all with flower judging and lots of games. A very friendly group of people!

Seven ladies, one man and one boy left Norland (and Kinmount) early Wednesday morning, June 29 to head for the nearest strawberry patch where many berries were picked in short order for a local upcoming Strawberry Supper. It was lots of fun!

I hope to hear Clarence Jewell is well and home from hospital very soon.

It appears we had our hot summer weather in May and early June and now that summer has officially arrived Fall weather has set in. Oh well, hang in there!

Things are certainly changing in these parts. The new house going up on Paul Street in Kinmount is looking nicer each day, the house down at our corner with the new face-lift is looking good, work going on downtown is improving the area and over Norland way there are three buildings within half a block either brand new or remodeling and very nice, plus a number of new houses going up. There was even a police escorted house being hauled up from Lindsay area to one of the resorts south of Norland on June 29. Actually, it looked like a parade with a cruiser in front, long truck pulling the house behind, a smaller truck behind with two flying flags, followed by another cruiser with all lights flashing and, of course, every few miles they had to stop so that the police could direct the accumulated traffic both ways before they could start up again. Somewhere following the parade was an old ambulance which carried the previously mentioned seven ladies, one man and one boy plus now, of course, it was carrying an added forty baskets of strawberries. You can be sure there was much care in passing the parade.

Happy birthday Canada!

Give me a call at 488-2353 if you wish your news aired. Stay well and happy and enjoy your summer.

PEOPLE

Guilford does Canada proud with its festivities

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff reporter

WEST GUILFORD CERTAINLY knows how to throw a birthday party. Just last Friday, when Canada was celebrating 121 years of confederation, this Pine Lake community everyone feel it was their celebration too.

It just wouldn't be July 1 without West Guilford's Canada Day festivities. And the wonderful thing about them is that the good things don't change they just stay the same—fun.

It's a day for children really, and for parents and relatives who like to cheer on the seven year olds in the sack races, or the girls sputtering out a shower of crackers as they try to whistle, or the two little girls tumbling over each other as they try to make a team in the wheelbarrow race. Vignettes of happy times and many memories fill up the day, and to each one who takes part, each one is special.

The ceremonies began Friday night at the teen dance at the community hall. It was quite a challenge for the judges but they finally were able to decide on a Miss and Mr. Canada, Krista Mitchell and Jeff Stamp. On Saturday, the two 16-year-olds could be seen walking among the crowds, dressed in spirited red and white outfits and shyly smiling as people asked if they could take their picture.

They stood beside John Eakins, the local MPP and Minister of Municipal Affairs, as he took part in the ceremonial raising of the flag. "You citizens make Canada what it is," he told the crowd, adding that it is the country flavour of these celebrations which make them his favourite to attend.

With Bill Davis acting as emcee, the attention now turned to two of the oldest and most respected participants. In honour of their great contributions to the community, cousins Blanche Linton and Elva Cooper were chosen as Citizens of the Year.

Both of the women were born in 1900, Eleanor Cooper explained in her speech, yet because "Mrs. L." is a few months older than Mrs. Cooper, she always earned the distinction of oldest visitor. Until Mrs. Linton moved to Parklane Apartments last year, the two lived across Highway 118 from one another.

Women honoured citizens

They are very familiar with the grounds of the community centre for this is where they made their way to school each day back in their youth. Young Elva was made to feel ill at ease, however, and on the first day of school, she ran away, going back to her home where she would learn her lessons in privacy before she had to suffer the classroom humiliations the next year.

Mrs. Linton shared the fate of many left-handers who were told good little girls and boys wrote with their right hand. No matter how awkward it was, she was forced into becoming a right hander.

As the women grew older, each devoted herself to those around her. Tiny Mrs. Cooper helped out with the chores and tended the farms by herself during all those lonely weeks when her husband went far away to hunt and camp. She would accompany him to their hunt camp near Algonquin Park and both here and at home, she became a cook "par excellence." Recently, she was filmed and interviewed for a National Film Board production about women who worked in munitions factories during World War One.

Mrs. Linton gained infamy when it became known she was the one who prepared Tom Thompson's last lunch for his ill-fated canoe trip. She too would have many troubles come her way, losing both her husband and her son a few decades ago. But instead of giving herself to grief, "Mrs. L" turned her attention towards her community in a variety of ways. Her spirit of co-operation and willingness to help has been appreciated by many people.

"They've both grown to be understanding and compassionate women," Eleanor Cooper said. "Their presence is treasured (and their hospitality has been abundant), sometimes to the point of exhaustion."

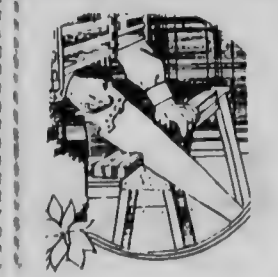

"I'm very pleased and I'm awfully glad I came," said Elva Cooper as she accepted the plaque from Eakins. "I'm glad I've served my life with so many of you."

Mrs. Linton wondered why someone felt it was so important she attend the opening services of Canada Day. "I wasn't aiming on coming until the afternoon." But now that she was there, it was evi-

THIS WEEK

Twins Justin and Jeremy Burk enjoy the day with their sister Virginia

Canada Day is especially for the children

dent it was with pride she accepted her plaque. "Even though I had to go to Haliburton, West Guilford is still home."

Here are some of the other distinctions awarded at Canada Day: Mark Stamp took 36 minutes to swim from one side of Pine Lake to the other, (one mile), but his cousin Jeff was only a few strokes behind him; the oldest man and women could start a collection with all the prizes they've been given—Percy Drysdale and Blanche Linton; when 16 of their descendants joined Ron and Erma Sisson, they could boast they had the most offspring at the festivities, a fitting contest for West Guilford; the youngest boy and girl were David Carr and Lindsay Applegath, two very recent newcomers to the area (the birth announcement for Lindsay is in this week's Echo); Kevin Harmon brought in eight rock bass to win the small fish derby; the best tosses of the horseshoe belonged to the team of Jim Morrison and Lorne Norton and earned them the Clarence Bain Memorial Trophy; Casey Ogle, Carrie Sisson and Bobbie Sisson arrived with the best decorated bicycles; the best women nail drivers were Rita Barry, Cheryl Cooper, Sandy Barry, and Barb Mercer, who had the strongest arms in the crowd; for the men this honour went to Shane and Kevin Sisson, two carpenters by trade; future carpenters are Feild Corbett, Darryl Upton, Jon Hebert, Danny Chumbley, and Colin Morrison; Kennedy Sport and Tackle donated a trophy for Emile Duchene and Bert Cowen for their cross-cut saw prowess; the family of Lorna Stackhouse is the real winner in the pie-baking contest but the families of Cheryl Cooper and Lois Boice don't do too badly either at dessert time (a ceramic pie plate was made and donated by Patty Morrison as a prize); Amy Gonder won the amateur contest with her melodic voice with Alana Woodcock coming in second with her youthful version and Katie Rodley and Jody Gavin winning the third place finish.

After the general excitement of the afternoon's races and contests, young and old got together for a rather unique game of baseball. Except for when they were up to bat, parent and child teams had to hold hands during the whole game. It makes for a hilarious sport on the part of the spectators but the participants seem to really enjoy it too.

Then everyone sat back to enjoy the talents of the local young people who took part in the amateur contest before the professional local band, Country at Heart, donated their time and musicianship until it got dark and the fireworks began.

If Canada could feel proud of the way it was feted in West Guilford, then the Community Centre committee which organized and funded the day should feel doubly proud of their success. That everyone felt the celebration was the highlight of the community's year was not in doubt as the smiles and laughter were seen on every face.

"As long as the kids enjoy themselves, that's all that counts," says Carol Stamp, vice-president of the centre. There is no other organized event targeted to young children and it is their day to find out what small-town life is all about. "If they've had fun we've made a success of it."

Victoria County party soon

come and see what goodies the ladies have made. Tablecloth draw will be at 3:00 p.m.

On Saturday July 16, the big Victoria County Party, gets you a beautiful lunch for $10 at 12:30. Lucky draws and lots of fun with entertainment an dancing the rest of the afternoon. Come out and join the fun. For tickets call Lloyd at 454-1509 or Adrian at 454-3489.

Congratulations to Mickey and Ethel Vanier and family on the official opening of their new business "Camping In Style", just north of Norland, the former Jim Boyce business. They will be carrying a good quality line of beautiful new trailers and trailer homes, as well as selling used trailers and a complete line of accessories.

The local Architectural Convention Advisory Committee met in the Coby Community hall on June 20. Minutes of the May 30 meeting were read and approved. Tina Davidson of Glen Arm has been hired to do research for our heritage projects for the summer months. Again, the old Kirk House, former United Church at Bexley was discussed and will be declared a Heritage Building. Present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Speer have requested this be declared a historical house. The Coboconk Railway Station was discussed. This is another building that should be declared a Historical Site. The original Railroad Station was built in 1876 but was struck by lightening and burned about 1908 and the present building was built at the cost of four thousand dollars, the same year. More research is required on the old station. A Mr. Clements now a resident of Carressent Care Seniors home in Lindsay, was an engineer on the train into Coboconk and can maybe help on some of the history, also a Mr. Charlie Hughes of Lindsay could have good information.

The Patti House Hotel and Shields Store are also among our older buildings. the former Breaw or Maisie Kelly's restaurant was at one time a Tannery and is an old building. Research into a couple of old Victoria Road buildings was discussed. It is hoped to find out who the first Reeve and Councilors were in Bexley Township, also the ones down through the years as well as clerks and road superintendents. St. Thomas Anglican Church is an old building and has a historical background. Much will be learned as the research is done by Tina over the summer. Next meeting will be on July 18.

One June 28 there was a Graduate Dinner held for the following Grade 8 students, who leave fond memories of Coboconk Public School and enter the young adult world of High School. Jackie Angiers, Jean Payne, Janice Brookes, Marsha Salmon, Tanya Spry, Carrie Liscombe, Kelly Richmond, Danny Dove, Daniel Wincenty, Billy Brademore, Joe McCarthy, Janet Ferill and Andrea Short. The dinner was held at the Legion hall.

Winners in the Coboconk Seniors Card games on Tuesday June 28 were as follows: Euchre, Mildred Faulkner 68, Ivy Boyce 66, most lone hands, Frieda Boyce 4, consolation, Greta Reeds 41, Eunice Kingdon 68, Adrian Lee 65, most lone hands, Adrian Lee 3, consolation, Ed Coppins 48. Bridge, Myra Dyou 3540, Nada Potts 3190, Merv Reeds 4230, Helen Gillies 3540.

The fireworks display on Friday night, Canada Day, held at the Park were really worthwhile seeing. One of the biggest crowds ever enjoyed the beautiful colours and artistic designs that lit up the night sky. The wind up of a lovely Canada Day and fun evening for old and young alike.

Suzanne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fajar, of Haliburton, recently graduated from Durham College of Applied Arts and Technology with a diploma in Business Accounting.

Church supper is Saturday

WEST GUILFORD NEWS
by Eleanor Cooper

Although it is covered elsewhere in this issue, congratulations to Elva Cooper and Blanche Linton on their receiving citizen of the year awards.

Company at our place over the holiday included the George Coopers from Timmins, Beth from Toronto and Alan with the McMaster Choir from Hamilton. Actually, it was the Mac Choir reunion weekend, not the whole choir. Only twenty-five of them came, as opposed to the forty who belong at present. They brought tents and our lawn blossomed in vivid colour as tents of various signs and shapes went up on Thursday night and on Friday. Our four pipers tuned up in the lane, marching to favourite tunes before the celebrations began at the Centre. In the evening the choir sang around a small campfire at the lake. Afterwards they crowded in the house to hear some fiddle and banjo music. (Mandolins, too, Andy didn't have to leave till Saturday morning.) Off and on all weekend someone would be at the piano or a group would be singing. The Wayne Strongman, their director, for coming and for all the years of training he supplied there.

Next door at Freemans, their company included Michelle Freeman of Etobicoke, Tracy Leek and Carl from Fordwich, Ontario, Crystal Fallis and Mark Freeman from Palmerston.

All Hillcrest Haven, some of the family and guests were: Mrs. Muriel Gavin, Ted and Jean Gavin, Donna Rodley and Brian Demoline, Roy and Marg Baker and Betty and Jim Hutchison.

Grenville Stamp was home for the holiday, which is always a welcome break for him. Anyone in Peterborough for the day, take time if you can to pay him a call at Civic Hospital.

Kevin Kreller, Grade 8 graduate also won the 1988 Art Award at the J.D. Hodgson School. Congratulations to Kevin and also to Scott Bannon who won a similar award with the opportunity to attend a week's art class at the Summer School.

Jean and Rod Henderson attended a B'hai festival: music, arts, dance, at Western University in London, Ontario.

Bonnie McAusland has acquired Rod Henderson's bee-keeping business. Already she has been successful in capturing a swarm.

Congratulations to Jean Bain whose seventieth birthday was celebrated at the Centre on Sunday. Family and friends in great numbers (approximately 100) showed up to wish her well and enjoy the salad supper followed by lots of goodies and fruit and topped off with a choice of three birthday cakes. All of Jean's family including Willis from the U.S. and their families were there. Jean's own Peters relatives attended as well. Gifts were presented and opened to the delight of the guest of honour.

St. Andrew's Church salad supper on July 9 will be held at the Community Centre rather than at the church this year, at 5:00 to 7:30 p.m. Come and feast on salads, rolls and strawberries with lots of cream. Eat now, diet later. Proceeds for St. Andrew's Church funds.

THANK YOU

I wish to thank past and present pupils, parents and teachers of Victoria Street School and my family and friends for the wonderful Retirement Party on Sunday June 26. I appreciated the Surrey Ride, Bagpipe Music and all the beautiful tributes in my honour. A special thanks to the parents who contributed to the delicious refreshments, flowers and decorations. What a beautiful day! To my super staff—thank you for the painting and memory album. These past 35 years of teaching have been so enjoyable and rewarding. I have so many lovely memories! Thank you again. Bonnie Walling. 27-B-6

We would like to say thank you to our family, friends and neighbours who came out to help us celebrate our 50th anniversary and make it a day we will always remember. Also for the many cards and gifts and money we received. We would also thank Marlene Chatterton and her ladies for the lovely dinner they served and Linda Robinson for helping us arrange everything. Many thanks to all. Lorne and Anne Marshall. 27-P-6

THANK YOU

Once again I would like to thank Clayton McCall for helping me with Lloyd and Eileen Heard, the ambulance drivers, our beloved Dr. Heyes, Gordon Monk and son Cameron and my beloved Uncle Lorne Sawyer. Also Melissa, the Red Cross Homemaker and Elaine Jackson for her tender loving care of Lloyd, a rare jewel of a nurse. Marie Wallace for playing the organ, Rev. John Smith for his loving words of comfort and reading our devotional for the mourning—Isiah 48 verses 17 to 22. The pall bearers, Charles and Edward Heard, Lawrence Packard, Ronald Bain, Dale McConnell and Allen Harrison, many thanks. To Eagle Lake Women for the lovely lunch, to Miss Allport and Marion Vanshaik and Jean Bain and Shirley Grubb for serving. To Rene Roberts for coming down and having supper with me. To all who sent flowers, cards, donated to the Ultra-sound fund and Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary, many thanks. Hebrews 12 Verse 1—Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Elva A. Heard 27-P-6
